

REMUS MURDER TRIAL NEAR CLIMAX

SAYS BEACH CONFESSED

WITNESS DECLARES
MURDER DEFENDANT
ADMITTED SLAYING

Wife Of Beach Will Testify For Woman He Loved

COURT HOUSE, MAYS
LANDING, N. J., Dec. 1.—
Willis Beach, 50-year-old alleged illicit lover of Mrs. Margaret Lillendahl, and jointly accused with her of murdering her husband, confessed to Samuel Bark, in Baltimore, shortly after the slaying that he had fired the fatal shot,
Bark testified today.

Woman was to defend woman at the trial today.

Spectators and jury expect to witness a bit of ironical drama when Mrs. Amanda Beach, gray-haired wife of Willis Beach, Margaret Lillendahl's dapper little admirer, takes the witness stand and testifies in defense of her alleged rival.

Mrs. Beach, as wife of the accused, is not permitted by law to testify in his behalf, but she can testify for Mrs. Lillendahl as her friend.

She will take the stand after the commonwealth concludes its case today, with the testimony of Samuel L. Bark, Baltimore attorney and former showman.

Harry F. Sanderson, a salesman of Sidney, Ohio, whose failure to make a complete identification of Beach as the man at the murder scene, was a surprise and disappointment to the prosecution, was under a physician's care today in Atlantic City, where he suffered a nervous collapse last night.

Rumors were current in the courtroom that Assistant Prosecutor S. Cameron Hinkle would take summary action against Sanderson and two other witnesses whose testimony caused the state to plead "surprise."

They were Jack Thornbower, young truck farmer of Vineland,
N. J., home of Beach and Mrs.
Lillendahl, and Henry Nitsche, of South Vineland. Thornbower pleaded Beach ever asked him to frame an alibi for him and Nitsche refused to identify the defendants as the couple he saw in two parked automobiles at the murder scene.

TWELVE FIREBALLS CROSS NEW ENGLAND

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 1.— Twelve fireballs racing high in the air, one with a long trail, passed over an area stretching obliquely from Eastport, Me., to Western,
Long Island on October 16, according to an announcement made today by the Harvard College observatory as the result of recent investigations.

One of these, with a long sweeping tail, was observed as passing from horizon to horizon, at Dennis-ville, Me., Cambridge, Mass., Thompson, Conn., and ended above
the southwest horizon of Seaford, Long Island. The air distance of this meteor was more than 430 miles. Its height could not be computed.

Harvard observers said that while this seems quite a long distance, other meteors have been known to go much farther, a group on Feb. 9, 1913, traveled from Saskatchewan to the South Atlantic off Cape Palmas. Another the meteor of July 29, 1860, went over Lake Michigan and Long Island Sound.

Afghanistan princess for his wife.
The princess, who is at school in Paris, wears eye glasses and

SAYS IMMIGRATION QUOTA PLANS SHOULD AFFECT NEIGHBORS

Restrictions For Canada
And Mexico Urged
By Solon

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Demands of enthusiastic restriction-ists that the immigration quota system be extended to America's nearest neighbors—Canada and Mexico—will get an airing in the new congress. Rep. Johnson (R) of Washington, chairman of the house immigration committee, announced today.

Declaring that he favors extension of the quota system, Johnson said that the question would be considered when the committee reviews the whole field of restricted immigration.

"I am in favor of the quota system for Canada and Mexico under restrictions," said Johnson. "It is a logical development of our policy."
"Such a system should provide for free interchange for business and trading purposes in certain zones along the borders. At present the advantage is all with Canada in this matter."

"People living in Windsor, Canada, under free trade conditions, have been going over to Detroit to enjoy the high wages under the American protective system. At the same time, Canadian authorities have exercised the right to stop Americans from going into Canadian cities to work whenever they feel there is undue competition with Canadian labor."

He declared that information has reached him into the effect that Canadian and Mexican official leaders would not object to the quota system.

Smuggling of aliens into the United States through both the Canadian and Mexican borders will be one of the chief immigration matters to be considered, he said.

BILL WOULD RETURN GERMAN PROPERTY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Another effort to pass a bill returning $250,000,000 worth of German property seized during the World War was started by the house ways and means committee today.

Rep. Green, (R) of Iowa, chairman, said he expected the committee to agree to recommend passage of substantially the same alien property bill that died in the senate last year.

Under this measure a bond issue of $50,000,000 would be authorized and this sum added to proceeds of sale of property and other German funds on hand to reimburse the foreign owners.

He will ask the committee to dispose of Austrian and Hungarian claims at the same time.

LONG LIVE DUCE

ROME, Dec. 1.—The rumor circulated on the London Stock Exchange today that Premier Mussolini had been assassinated, is not true. Il Duce was at his desk today in perfect health. The source of the rumor is unknown here.

FOUR OHIOANS KILLED WHEN AUTO IS STRUCK AT CROSSING

DECATUR, Ind., Dec. 1.—Four persons lost their lives here today when a train struck an automobile.
The dead, all from Willshire, Ohio, were:

Miss Hazel Lamonium, 24.
Mrs. Kenneth Hoblet, 21.
Alfred Stutler, 36.
Hobart Strickler, 33.
All but Strickler were killed instantly. Strickler died later at the Decatur Hospital.

All four were on their way to work in the General Electric factory here when the accident occurred.

Frost on the windshield of the sedan in which the four were riding was believed to have prevented the driver from seeing the train.

BLOCS AND ALLIANCES WILL RULE NEXT CONGRESS SESSION

Insurgents Will Swing Support From One Side To
The Other—Sections Will Oppose Sections In Problems

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The incoming seventh congress today appeared doomed to a rule of blobs and alliances instead of the usual party control.

The western insurgents will hold a balance of power in the senate while in the house they seem certain to wield a like power, if administration fails at any time to hold all Republicans in line. On many legislative matters the insurgents are preparing to revive their old alliance with the Democrats against the administration ranks.

All indications point to bloc rule on the three outstanding legislative measures confronting the new congress. These are the tax bill, a farm relief measure and flood control legislation.

On the tax bill, the insurgents sided with Secretary of the Treasury Mellon against the Democrats in his demand for limited reduction of $225,000,000. On the other hand, they disagreed with Mellon and sided with the Democrats on how this reduction should be applied to existing taxes. The tax bill probably will represent a compromise between the views of the three groups.

On farm relief, the far west, middle west and southwest have lined up generally against the east.
New England and some lines will be dropped, entirely in the farm relief battle and the administration itself may carry the final
"balance of power."

On flood control, the lines will shift again, without regard for the two old parties. At present indications, the south and middle west will form a strange alliance with New England because of their local floods. The east may organize some opposition to their program, although the legislation is still buried in the committee.

Party lines will be dropped again when the "big navy" fight opens over the construction of new cruisers. Here the administration will get Democratic as well as insurgent support, while losing many of its customary votes. The same situation will apply to legislation affecting military aviation.

Different alliances will be formed when the Boulder Dam and Muscle Shoals bill comes up for consideration. The insurgents will fight for government operation of both projects and will get some support from both the regular Republican and Democratic ranks. In both instances, the administration will probably hold a "balance of power."

On the straits warning me against sharks.
"But sharks or no sharks, I am going to try. I realize the danger and I realize that my escort may be just the opposite of protection, since sharks have a habit of following ships."

The arrangements made for Miss Gleitze's journey to Tangier, her stay there and her actual swiming for something between a visit of royalty and a champion boxer's preparations for a title fight.

FORM COMMISSION TO DRAFT NATIONAL SECURITY PROGRAM

United States Not Represented—Soviet Plan Scoffed

GENEVA, Dec. 1.—Dr.
Eduard Benes, foreign minister of Czechoslovakia, was today elected chairman of the security commission of the League of Nations preparatory disarmament conference.

This commission was appointed to draft the views of the participating powers as to what national security each needed before limiting armaments. The United States will not be represented upon the commission, although Soviet Russia, also a non-member,
will have an observer.

Dr. Uritia, of Columbia, and Dr.
Uden, of Sweden, were chosen vice chairmen of the commission.

Delegates to the conference have refused to take seriously the dra-tic and far reaching proposals of Soviet Russia for abolition of all armies, navies and military and naval air fleets, and the reduction of all forts within the next four years.

Representatives of the leading powers said they believed the Soviet's program was too "strong" for use even as a basis of discussion.

Maxim Litvinoff, head of the Soviet delegation, issued a 4,000 word document, mostly propaganda, containing a long survey of the World War and statistics on losses.

The document states that there were 10,692,000 persons killed, of whom 107,000 were Americans, and 22,100,000 were wounded, 245,000 of them Americans. The war prisoners, according to the survey, totaled 6,989,000, of whom 5,000 were Americans.

The Russians put the cost of the war at $147,922,000,000.

Despite the cold shoulder that the Soviets' proposals received from the league members, the Soviet delegates worked with unabated fervor today. Litvinoff held a number of conferences in an effort to have the Soviets' program kept before the conference.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Minister Hugh Wilson at Geneva was instructed by the state department today to advise the League of Nations that the United States sees no reason for sending an official American observer to participate in the meeting of the league's security commission.

DISCOVER PLOT TO UPSET ROUMANIA

BUCHAREST, Dec. 1.—Roumanian secret police have discovered a communist plot in Bessaratia for an uprising against the Roumanian administrative government, according to a dispatch from Kishinev today. Scores of communist have been arrested. The police claim to have discovered a manifesto revealing conspirators at work in all Bessarabian cities.

The mixed Soviet-Roumanian commission, which will attempt to arbitrate the Bessarabian frontier dispute, will meet on Saturday at Tighina.

Bessarabia was formerly a Russian province, but was annexed by Roumania after the World War.

STUDENTS ESCAPE

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 1.—College students were forced to flee to the streets here early today when fire broke out in the eleven-room boarding house of Mrs. J. A.
Rinehart. The fire is believed to have started from an overheated gas stove in the room of C. E.
Seibie, Warren, Ohio, a freshman at Ohio State University. Loss is estimated at $1,000 and is covered by insurance.

A special suite and cabin have been reserved for her on the Rotterdam, Lloyd steamship liner gar-rying her to Tangier. At Tangier Miss Gleitze will be received as the guest of the Grand Hotel Valentina. The hotel has arranged for a woman companion and a gymnastic instructor as well as providing a pilot boat and pilot to accompany her.

A voluntary escort and a doctor will accompany Miss Gleitze while a moving picture operator makes films of the swim.

Chambliss is attempting to identify the body by investigating reports of persons missing in this section since Sunday.

He expects to follow up a report of the disappearance of Ova Maloney, Mt. Sterling. Maloney was scheduled to go to Middletown Monday morning, having been called by a relative, J. P. Dyer, but failed to arrive and his whereabouts are unknown.

This is the only disappearance case reported.

EX-HUSBAND SOUGHT IN MURDER

BROADCASTING FOR THURSDAY IS UNDER NEW CLEARING PLAN

Listeners Tonight May Enjoy Lack Of Interference

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—For the first time since radio broadcasting has attained national importance, listeners tonight will be able to obtain heterodyneless reception on most of the channels between 600 and 1000 kilocycles, provided the wave-clearing operation made effective December 1 proves the "as-advertised panacea."

Last midnight frequency shifts, power changes and time division orders were made effective to set up what the Federal Radio Commission believes will prove national radio highways over which programs may travel from coast to coast without interference.

Substantially, the plan clears the ether on twenty-five channels out of thirty-five within this band, and for thirty-six stations with sufficient power to have a national reception range under good atmospheric conditions. These are the stations with 1,000 watts or greater power on the cleared channels.

Before the first of the year through complete relicensing of all stations on the air, the commission plans to clear the other ten channels in the 600-1000 kilocycle band.
On the unlicensed channels are twenty-two stations with power of 1000 watts or greater, and a large percentage of these probably will be retained to establish from forty-to fifty stations as "national."

Six stations with over 10,000
watts power are found in the 600-1000 kilocycle band WEAF, of New York, KDKA, of Pittsburgh and WGNY of Schenectady, with 50,000 watts; WJZ, of New York, 20,000 watts; WLIB, of North Elkh, Ill., 15,000.

Some of the smaller stations in this band have permits to operate in day time only, while many stations have additional power between 6 a. m. and 6 p. m., that they may transmit effectively to the rural districts with market reports and other agricultural information.

Many minor stations were removed from the 600-1000 kilocycle band in the clearing process.

The commission endeavored to provide good reception for every section of the country through its re-allocation. Listeners who go in for long distance may get some real enjoyment out of "DX-ing" if tonight's test of the new plan proves a success.

The rural districts should be able to pick up programs from nearly any part of the United States.

Chicago, by reason of its location, has been given five cleared waves. From the standpoint of a tremendous audience which listens to programs transmitted from Chicago, this city was regarded as entitled to preferential treatment.

Cincinnati, St. Louis, Cleveland and Detroit were given the opportunity to share with Chicago in providing programs for the Middle West.

DEFENDANT TO TAKE STAND; PROMISING MANY REVELATIONS

Secretary Of Former Liquor King Is Also Heard

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 1.—
The Remus murder trial, already replete with sensational testimony, is nearing its climax.

George Remus, the picturesque defendant, who shot and killed his wife, Imogene, and who is putting up a spectacular battle to escape the electric chair, is expected to take the stand in his own defense tomorrow or Saturday.

"I'm going to tear things wide open," he promised today. "Remus has revelations to make and no one is going to stop him."

Before Remus takes the stand, two "key" witnesses for the defense, and possibly a few minor ones, will testify to what they know of the stormy life of Remus before he killed Mrs. Remus last October 6 in Eden Park. The "key" witnesses are George Conners, Remus' business partner for years and his confidential adviser, and Willie Haar, of Savannah, Ga., whose rum running operations along the Atlantic seaboard a few years ago earned him the cognomen of "admiral of the bootleggers."

Conners, a quiet slender man of about 35 with dark curly hair and unobtrusive manner, will tell how he quit the real estate business to cast his fortunes with Remus when the "king of the bootleggers" came to Cincinnati from Chicago in 1919, how they bought one distillery after another, ran a few thousand dollars up into the millions and became wealthy; how Conners, Remus' partner, was jailed for violating the prohibition act, what he knows of Mrs. Remus' alleged unfaithfulness while Remus was in prison and of events that took place immediately prior to the tragedy. For one thing, Conners will emphatically deny that he took part in any conspiracy to kill Mrs. Remus as charged by the state.

Haar, a slim, blue-eyed, flaxen haired mild mannered southerner, served time in Atlanta with Remus on a liquor conspiracy charge, and is expected to give intimate details of the alleged intimacy between Mrs. Remus and Franklin
L. Dodge, former prohibition slouth.

The Remus forces expressed jubilation today over the testimony of John T. Rogers, a St. Louis newspaper reporter. He testified that Mrs. Remus and Dodge offered St. Louis gangsters $15,000 to murder Remus in Indianapolis during the Jack Daniels case. He said Dodge showed him two pistols in the Claypool hotel, Indianapolis, which the dry agent said were "ready for Remus." He also identified a contract in which Dodge agreed to sell in which 2,000 barrels of whiskey said to have belonged to Remus. His evidence was regarded as the strongest in favor of the defense so far given to the jury, and added importance was attached to it because of the fact that Rogers, through his newspaper work, was intimately associated with all the principals in the Remus melodrama.

BOND FORFEITED IN LIQUOR CASE HERE

Forsythe was fined for possessing liquor and discharged from custody upon giving bond, guaranteeing the good faith of his promise to pay the fine within about two weeks months.

RHEUMATISM

May be relieved by rational treatment—it can not be rubbed away.

Are you one of those unfortunate who suffer with pains in your muscles and joints, commonly called rheumatism, making you miserable, less efficient, interfering with your working hours, ruining your sleep?

You may have tried many things without relief. Why not try S.S.S.? For more than 100 years it has been giving relief in thousands of cases, as testified in unsolicited letters of gratitude.

"I suffered from rheumatism for a good many years. At times my joints would swell so, I couldn't walk. I tried almost everything. Went to Hot Springs . . . then finally decided to try

S.S.S. I took a course. In a short time the rheumatic pains entirely left me. I am now in perfect health, and want to add that I have tried all kinds of medicines but I think S.S.S. is the best." Earl C. Campbell, 115 West Main Street, Johnson City, Tenn.

S.S.S. is purely vegetable. It is extracted from the fresh roots of medicinal plants and herbs and gives to Nature what she needs in building you up so that your system throws off the cause.

S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

NO MORE "IRRELIGIOUS QUACKERY"

More than $8,000,000 people are carrying life insurance in the United States today, where only half a century ago a suspicious public placed the insurance agent in the same category with the medical quack and the confidence man.

This is the striking contrast brought out in a study of the phenomenal growth which has made America the most thoroughly insured nation in the world since life insurance was introduced 80 years ago.

A vice-president of one of the large companies tells that when he first started out as a country lad to sell life policies, his mother, his relatives and friends were shocked and did their best to dissuade him, because of the unreasoning prejudice against insurance which existed until long after the Civil War.

People once generally regarded insurance selling as a disreputable occupation. Preachers used to preach against it. People thought it irreligious to insure one's life, something like gambling against the will of God. Wives wept over it and were superstitious that it might hasten the death of their husbands.

Despite the fact that the total of life insurance has mounted year by year until now that carried in the United States passes the sixty-billion-dollar mark, the rate of increase shows no indications of being checked, it is asserted.

The increase in insurance volume of recent years is ascribed to the introduction of the new "program insurance" which provides that the policy buyer adopt a specific program of protection, taking out policies which will guarantee his family against all conceivable emergencies as the possibilities of the emergencies become apparent.

OHIO GETS BEST RATE

State Treasurer Bert B. Buckley, has succeeded in putting Ohio at the head of the list in the matter of interest secured on the state's inactive funds. In a comparative table recently published by the state treasurer of Idaho, the Ohio rate paid, on the average, by banks holding deposits of inactive state funds, is 4.85 per cent. Six other states reach a 4 per cent rate on such funds, but more than half the states report 3 per cent or under.

Ohio selects depositories for her state funds by competitive bidding on the rate of interest, having discovered in the course of her financial history that competitive bidding on the rate of interest is far more sensible and profitable than competitive bidding on the basis of political pull. The change, since it was made, has not only enabled the state to realize large sums of interest money on its funds but has removed one important source of corruption from our government machinery. Ohio people will be surprised to learn that only one other state, Kansas, has as yet adopted the sound business principles of selecting its depository banks in this way.

ENJOYING WINTER

Formerly when the last baseball game had been played and the football players had been driven off the fields by mud and snow, the American people hibernated in the winter quarters.

But their love for active competitive sports has asserted itself and developed various pastimes for winter diversion. From thousands of basketball halls the rooters make the building shake and demonstrate that the young crowd is thoroughly awake.

And in the bowling alleys, you find men of all ages rolling the slippery ball at those elusive pins that seemed to wink and grin as so frequently they escape your attack. The men who seem very quiet and sedate during the daytime are having a rollicking good time at the top of their voices. These sports make winter life very pleasant, and no one should say the winter is dull when such chances for healthful pleasure are offered.

The Way of the World

PALACES

Few of us live in palaces, and if we do, they do us little good. The only place worth while is the palace within you. In that you truly live. Perhaps within you is only a bare and miserable shack—and you have built nothing else.

"And when my ill-schooled spirit is aflame," said Matthew Arnold, "some nobler, ampler stage of life to win, I'll stop and say, 'there were no succor here, the aids to noble life are all within.'"

Out of a multitude of decisions we build character—we build the house we are forever to live in. We do not HAVE to live in pig pens. Strange that many of us choose to.

SHAMS AND REALITIES

People often boast of their skill in seeing through shams. They can't be fooled. They can detect insincerity. That may be something to boast about but it's a gift that can never make up for the dullness and the obtuseness which keep us from detecting SINCERITY. Not to be able to identify sincerity when you see it is to put yourself down as without sensitiveness, without perspicacity, without any intellectual skill.

TRIVIALITIES

Too many of us are like the folks who will be found doctoring a toothache on the Day of Judgment. We are so quickly excited about matters that have no reference to human progress or that have no real meaning in life.

SUCCESS AND SERENITY

There is no serenity and peace of mind in what the world superficially calls a success. Results follow the act or the thought as the wheel follows the foot of man who drags the cart. Serenity can only follow the consciousness of having done as well as you could.

The Daybook

OF A

New Yorker

By
Burton Rascoe

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—William Randolph Hearst has bought the old Belmont mansion at Sands Point, Long Island. The baronial shack contains an electric elevator which thoughtfully deposits such guests as like service right down on the beach. Mrs. Belmont natives of Port Washington used to say, objected strenuously to the sightseers who used to gallop to view the old Sands Point light house. The light house has been removed during the last few years, but maybe Mrs. Belmont had her sense of privacy so shattered by what England calls "trippers" that she just wasn't able to enjoy the manse any more. Anyway, it's sold.

Dirty little boys run up to you as you try to park your car in the narrow confines of MacDougal street, crying, "Watch y'r car for yuh, mister." And when you come out of the restaurant where you have to ring the bell and ask sotto voce, for Antoine, or Sebastian, or Jules, when you cross over under the glaring arc lights of the Provincetown Playhouse, and seek your chariot once more, the same little boys are still on the job, dirtier than before, more exigent than before. This MacDougal street always makes me think of some incredible stage setting, it is so noisy, so melodramatic, so over-emphasized, so Belasco. I expect some preposterous Lulu Belle to step out from the crowd and do her stuff, as the people on the by-lines applaud. It is a sordid, pushing, altogether amusing thoroughfare. And the last is irony!

Coming out of Roxy's at the closing hour the other night, I witnessed the grand gestures that take place as the ushers prepare to cease their reverent labors for the day. In a small balcony, near the dome of the main lobby, a bugler plays taps as the ushers below form in military parade and march smartly out.

I have yet to meet a woman who doesn't drop gloves out of her lap at the theater and cause me to search around for them in the dark, right at the tender moments of the show. "Never mind! Never mind this please!" which means, "Find those gloves for me if you have to crawl around on your hands and knees in the dark till the show lets out!"

Nor have I ever met a woman, who, if she had gloves with her, doesn't drop at least one of them just as she steps out of the cab. If there is a large puddle of water there from which I have to fish them out, she (or they) will inevitably drop two gloves, with: "There go my gloves! Oh, I'm so sorry. Stupid of me! Now you have got yourself all muddy on my account! Thanks so much! Too bad you had to soil your handkerchiefs! They can be dry cleaned!"

Still, there are women who do not discover that they have left one glove in a taxicab until they have dropped its mate and who seem to expect you to run after the cab which has already got hidden in the traffic.

Discovered: A Chinese who is an ardent Irish patriot! Lemon Lee Sing, a laundryman living in Jersey City. Not long ago he aroused some comment by adopting an eight-year-old negro orphan, who had been beating his way about the city. The two are now inseparable friends. And the other day, Judge Meaney, who had presided over the adoption, received a letter from Lemon Lee in which was enclosed one of the ten dollar Irish free state bonds, issued in 1920. Lemon explained that as Ireland was getting along pretty well now, he would like to dispose of his bonds. Would the honorable judge please dispose of them? He would and he did.

KELLYGRAMS

by Fred C. Kelly

FROM AN IRISH DIARY
We have been driving in a little medium-priced American automobile from Cork to Killarney, across Ireland, westward, a little more than 100 miles, and having a private car is a rather costly luxury. If we hadn't been so impetuous about hiring this car, we might have discovered that the same trip in a comfortable auto-bus would cost perhaps less than $5 apiece. A private car cost several times that, with the additional advantage that one misses all the fun of visiting with other passengers en route.

Unless going far from the usual tourist routes, one is foolish to go to the expense of private cars, for the travel agencies are prepared to send you almost anywhere by automobile and in a reserved seat.

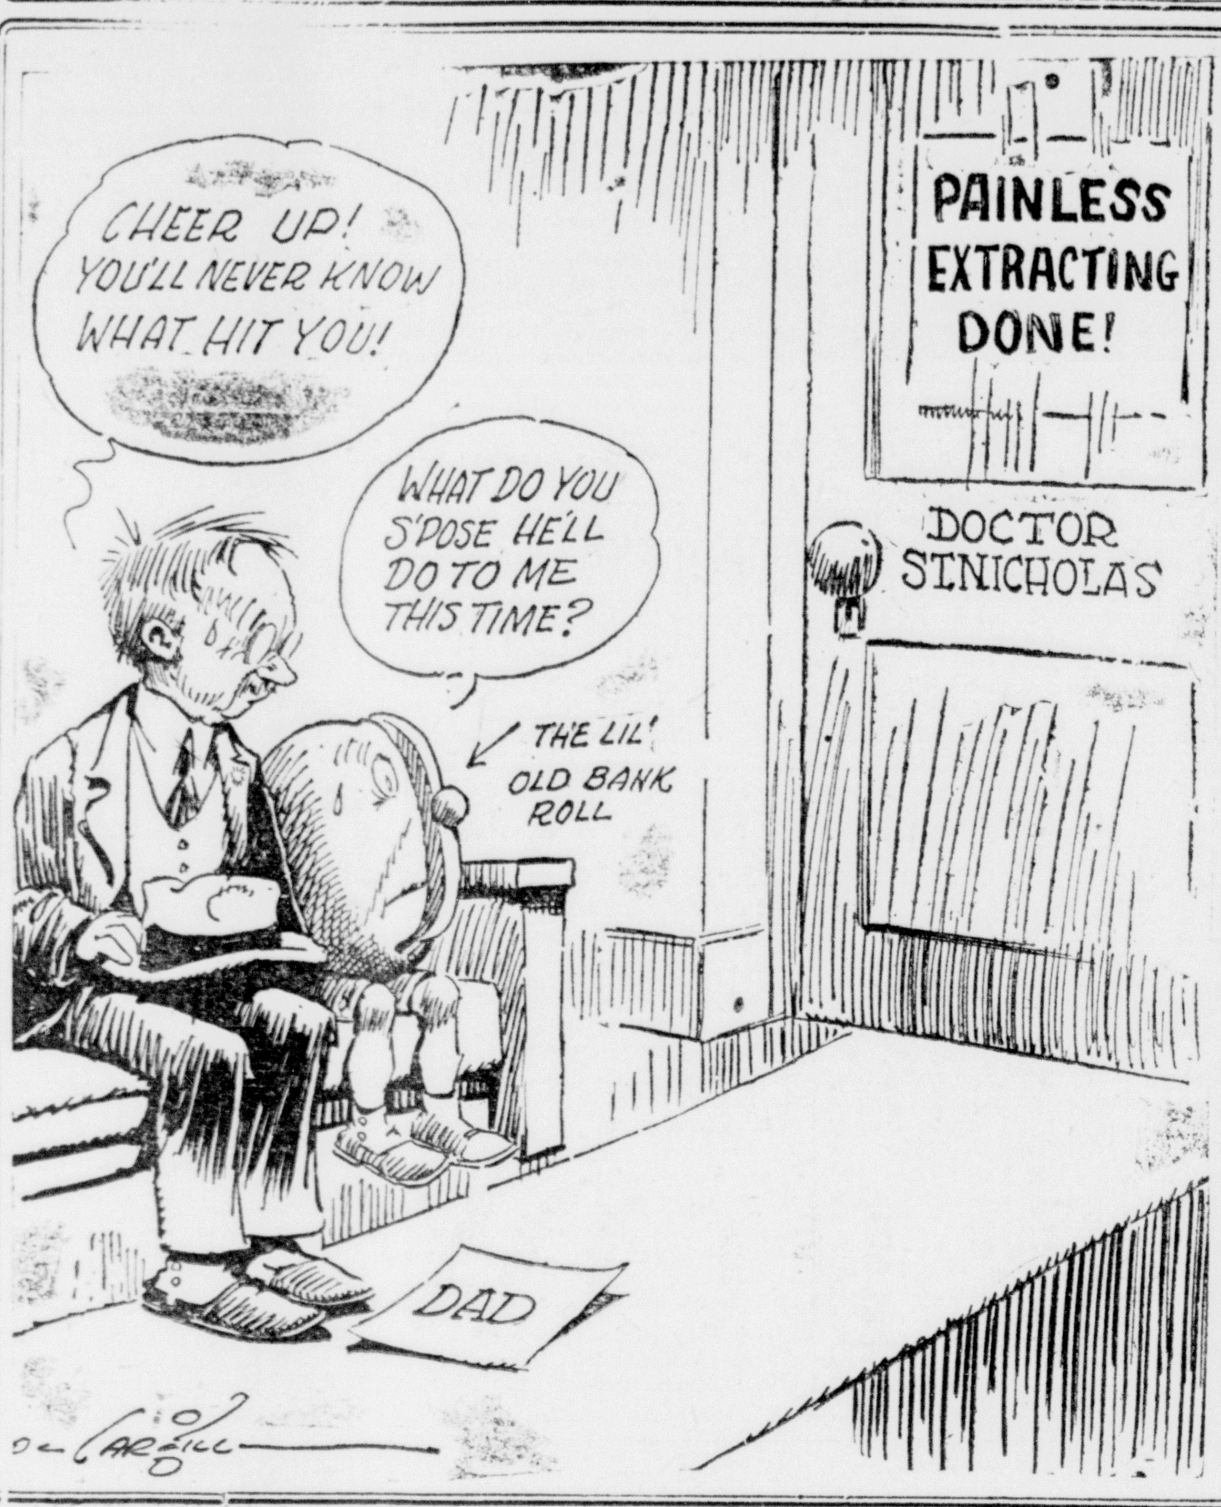

One advantage, though, of having control of a small car, is that one can stop and talk to folks who look interesting or amusing.

We passed two Irishmen, father and son, standing by a pile of peat near the roadside.

"Let's engage them in conversation and see if the Irish have as much blarney as we've been told," suggested Dr. Brink.

We asked them if they had any

WAITING FOR SANTA CLAUS

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

UNFORGIVING

When a person shows an unforgiving spirit, should that person's friendship be cultivated? Would such a person make a good life companion? Why do people worry so much about unworthy friends?

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am much in need of advice and hope you will give it to me. I am 16 and I love a boy who is two years my senior. I went with him last year and he seemed to care for me quite a lot. Then one day I insulted him, unconscious of what I was doing. He acted very coldly towards me for about a month. We became friends again but he has never asked me to go out since then. He is constantly bringing it up about the time I insulted him. I try very hard to make him believe I did not mean it, but he simply will not believe me. He has begun to go out with other girls. He tells me he does not like them, but goes out with them 'for fun'. Why does he do this when he knows it hurts me? He claims he loves me and finds a great difference between me and other girls. Do you think he means it?"

"Actions speak louder than words," my dear. If he does love you, as he says, he certainly shows it in a queer way. I don't see how you can really love a person who seems so unforgiving and inconsiderate.

What do dreams mean? Well, Mr. Freud had some very definite opinions on the subject and so have a good many other people. I had a friend once who declared that whenever she dreamed of a fire she had trouble next day, and she went around looking for it. Needless to say she found it.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am going to ask you a simple but foolish question. If a fellow dreams of a girl, does he care for her, or was he thinking of her before he fell asleep? I met a fellow Labor Day. I haven't seen or thought of him since, but the other night I dreamed of him. And I am sure I do not care for him. My question does not refer to my dream. I met a fellow at a friend's house. He hardly noticed me, but my friend wrote me that he told her he dreamed of me. I am very anxious to get a little information, as I like this fellow very much. BILLY."

I am afraid as an interpreter of dreams I am a total loss. Billy, the boy might have been thinking of you and he might not. Some people dream of things of which they think a great deal in waking hours, others do not. Whether he thought of you before or not, may be the dream will make this young man think of you more.

"An old fashioned lass" sends a message of cheer to "Doubtful," who some time ago wrote a letter expressing his doubt as to whether there were any decent girls left nowadays.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: This column is getting many worthwhile letters written by such serious minded young people. I would like to tell "Doubtful" that I have had about the same experience, even though I am of the opposite sex. Recently a young man asked me for a date. During the evening he asked me to kiss him. I refused him primarily because I had never made a practice of kissing every boy that took me out and also because I didn't want him to think me cheap. I gave him no chance to think I wanted petting. He has never asked me for another date. A lot of girls I know positively hate petting but they do it, and allow it because they know that the boys with whom they associate expect it of them. I for one will stand by my theory and will make exception for no boy. I don't think there is a boy in our community who doesn't go in for petting. So all I can do is wait. I sincerely hope that "Doubtful" will get a real decent girl of whom he dreams. AN OLD FASHIONED LASS."

I Have Said in My Heart

By IDA H. McCLONE GIBSON COWARDICE

"All men are cowards," bitterly affirmed a woman, who had recently been embroiled in a matrimonial tangle that even involved the legitimacy of her child, whom her husband proclaimed did not belong to him.

Not all men are cowards. Indeed, few men are physical cowards, but I will venture to affirm that if a hundred women picked at random were asked the question ninety-five out of the hundred would say that more men were moral cowards.

A man steers clear of breaking the eleventh commandment. He never breaks "Thou shalt not be found out." If he can possibly help it.

The greatest moral coward in the world makes a fetish of convention. He keeps the laws of society, even if he is prone to fracture the laws of God.

A man will enter into an illicit love affair; he will tell the trusting woman: "I love you so much that the world means nothing to me without you."

"You are the only person who understands me."

"My wife is a good woman, but we have nothing in common." But he does not say that. "Besides my reputation you will mean nothing, my dear, so remember, we must not be found out."

The woman who gives her soul into the keeping of any man who makes such promises must realize that he probably will lay upon the altar of their love everything but his reputation. Then, even if his wife does not understand him, even

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Albert C. Ritchie made a mistake in 1926, when he preferred a third term as governor of Maryland to a United States senate seat.

He could have had the senate just as well.

Senator O. E. Weller, who was running for re-election, is a Republican. Ritchie, as a Democrat, had every right to beat him if he could.

And he could. The nomination was his, for saying so. Representative Millard E. Tydings, who took it because Ritchie didn't want it, won in a walk. Ritchie could have won in a slow walk.

Another term as governor was Ritchie's own selection. It's easy to see why. He had presidential aspirations. Politicians consider a governorship a better taking off place for the presidency than they do a senatorship. The theory is that a senator is more or less lost among 95 others, while a governor stands out by himself.

Besides, no Maryland governor ever served three terms before, which was an additional distinction in Ritchie's case.

This may be sound reasoning if the governorship is the governorship of a big pivotal state.

The governor of New York becomes, automatically, a national character as soon as he's elected. So do the governors of states like Ohio and Illinois, in lesser degree.

That the governorship of one of the smaller states has any such political value isn't so plain, unless the incumbent can manage to attract attention to himself in some other way, as by means of a police strike or a well managed flood or a graft exposure or something of that sort.

Nationally, Maryland is a good deal of a political backwater. Ritchie is rather extra prominent but ordinarily it's a question if the average American, except in the immediate neighborhood, can tell, off hand, who is the governor of Maryland.

To a mid-westerner, the New York governorship probably means more than a senatorship, but a senatorship means a lot more to him than the governorship of Maryland.

Ritchie, a dyed-in-the-wool Marylander and doubtless accustomed, like most of us, to think of his own habitat as the most important spot on earth, seems to have overestimated the political publicity value of that Annapolis governorship of his.

He evidently realized the necessity of advertising himself, for he's made quite an extensive speaking tour before public gatherings of one kind or another, but it wasn't mass production of popularity.

As it was, he'd have been more effective, from the standpoint of his own good, as Senator than as Gov. Ritchie.

In fact, he's so much classier than the typical politician that he's been a better advertisement for his governorship, perhaps, than the governorship has been for him.

His declaration in Washington recently that Al Smith, as the situation has shaped itself, is entitled to first consideration as the Democrats' bid for the presidency, is of a piece with the good sportsmanship the Maryland executive has shown all through.

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

PROTECTIVE FINISHING TOUCHES

How do you make up your face for winter? Do you use an indecent lipstick so you will be sure it stays on in spite of the wind and rain or snow? Do you take along with you, when you are away from home, plenty of rouge and powder so that you can be always putting it on over the old make-up that has grown shabby-looking? Are you always worrying because your nose is red or your powder shows? If that is the way you apply your beauty aids in the winter, let me give you a few words of advice that will not only render your make-up absolutely harmless to your delicate skin, but will make it an actual protection as well.

First, there is rouge, for what would most of us do without it? You will find the "staying" or "problem" beautifully solved if you will start the day with a cream rouge. Put a little on one finger, apply it gently in a few small spots, or better still, in triangular formation in the center of your cheek, then take another finger and blend it in, being careful to follow the lines of natural color. When you achieve the knack of applying cream rouge well, there is nothing in the world that could make your color look more natural. And it is remarkably adherent. It has the further advantage that it is not drying at all, and it does not clog them. For daytime touching up you can carry a rouge compact.

As for lipstick, I have often heard women say "the best thing I can use to keep my lips from getting dry and cracked is a good lipstick." And it is an actual fact that if you have a lipstick made on a good cream base, you will not need to give your lips any further care to keep them soft and smooth.

Do not make the mistake of using an altogether indecent lipstick, as it is likely to crack and dry your lips; it may even make young lips look old. I want to give you one bit of warning. Be very careful not to be constantly wetting your lips with your tongue. Nothing is worse for them than that, it simply exposes them to a double dose of chapping.

Powder, too, is an important consideration in your make-up. Powder has been blamed for all kinds of skin troubles—blackheads, pimples, coarse pores—but the truth of the matter is that women do not get the right kind of powder for their particular skins. For skin that is naturally dry or has been dried out and roughened by winter weather, a special powder made on a cream base should always be used. Similarly, the oily skin should have a powder with an absorbent base. And in winter, especially, it is well to apply a good skin toning lotion, or a light touch of cold cream, as powder base, before applying your powder.

I cannot leave you with a well-cared-for, well-protected face and neglected hands, so in my next talk I shall discuss the subject, "Protect Your Hands Against Winter Roughness and Redness."

Peter's Adventures

A CAVE IN TIME

"Oh, me," sighed my next door neighbor, "Summer is almost over!"

"Oh, my," hissed the Serpent across the way, "Winter will soon be here!"

"I think I'm going to cry," wailed a young wriggler.

"No more toads," "No more sun," "No more mice," "No more fun!"

"I think we're going to die!" mourned old Uncle Twelve-die!

"My tail is getting so stiff I can't wriggle it and my scales are becoming tight. Soon I shan't be able to move!"

"Now, I had been feeling very low-spirited, indeed, but—funny thing—the very moment I heard the rest of those serpents saying such gloomy things I began to feel better at once. So much company in my misery made me nearly happy."

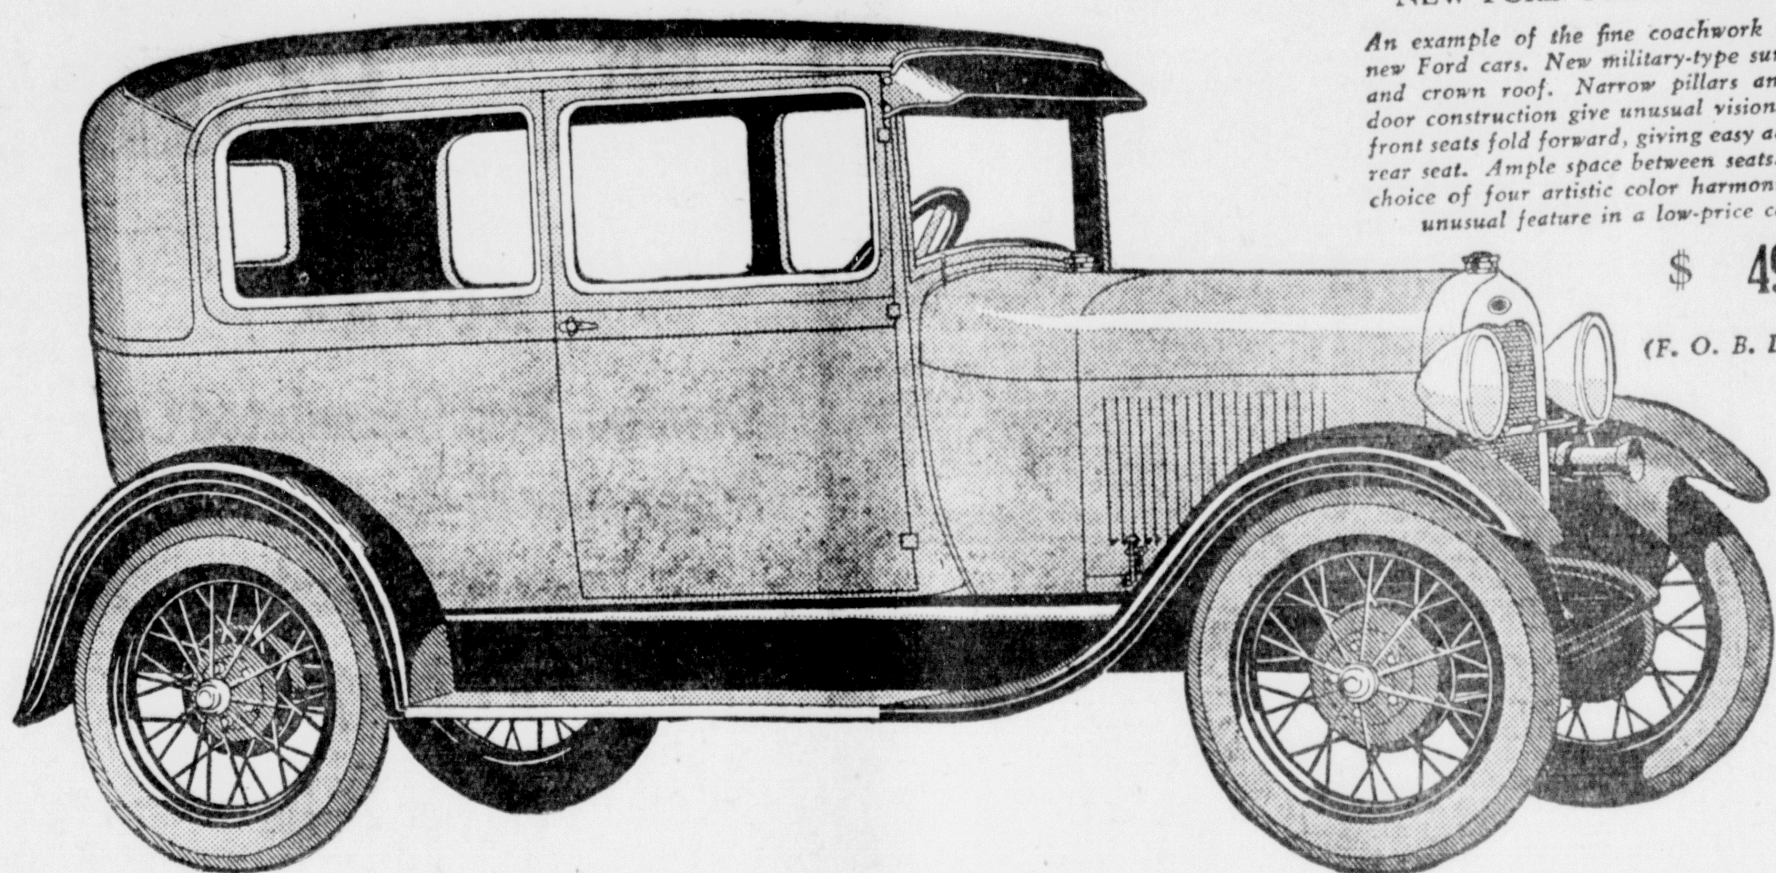

"Fangs and fiddlesticks!" hissed I. "What are you all so afraid of, friends and fellow serpents? Summer is almost over; winter will soon be here, to be sure, but you need not wall about that! The seasons have changed since the first snake crawled. And you are not going to freeze. At least, nobody is going to suffer alone! I have a fine idea."

"What? Why? Tell us about it," hissed my neighbors.

"It was not often that a serpent has a chance to give advice to so many of his kind. Usually every snake thinks he is as smart as the next one. So you may be sure, Two-Legs, I made the most of my opportunity."

"Well, I know a cave—a cave so deep and dark that no sound or sight could disturb us. In a cave half way down the side of a cliff—a cliff so steep that no

TOMORROW at Ford salesrooms

FOR SEVERAL years we have been working on the new Ford car. For weeks and months you have been hearing rumors about it. For the past few days you have been reading some of the details of it in the newspapers.

Whatever you do tomorrow, take at least fifteen minutes to get the full story of this new automobile.

You will realize then that it is an entirely new and different Ford car, designed and created to meet modern conditions—a car that brings you more beauty, speed, quiet, comfort, safety, economy and stamina than you ever thought possible in a low-price car.

Automobile history will be made tomorrow, for the new Ford is not only new in appearance and performance... it is new in mechanical design. Many features of it are exclusive Ford developments. Some are wholly new in automobile practice. Its low price is a reflection of manufacturing improvements and economies that are as epoch-making as the car itself.

Nineteen years of experience in building 15,000,000 automobiles are behind the new Ford car and have counted in its making. Resources unmatched in the motor car industry are its heritage and its birthright.

The Ford policy of owning the source of raw materials, of making virtually every part, of doing business at a small profit per car, has cut many dollars off the price you would ordinarily have to pay for a car like this.

So we say to you—learn about this new Ford car tomorrow. Compare it with any other car in the light-car field for beauty of line—for comfort—for speed

—for quick acceleration—for flexibility in traffic... for steadiness at all speeds... for power on the hills... for economy and low cost of up-keep... for its sturdy ability to stand up under countless thousands of miles of service.

Then you will know why tomorrow will be remembered as one of the greatest days in the entire history of the automobile industry... Then you will know why the new Ford car will be your car.

CAESARCREEK HIGH TEAMS OPEN FRIDAY WITH ALUMNI GAMES

Caesarcreek High School alumni are being rallied for the basketball game with the Caesarcreek High regulars Friday night which will open the court season for the high school team.

Both boys' and girls' teams will help the high school squads inaugurate the season Friday night at Paintersville and many former court stars are getting the kinks out of their knee-joints in anticipation of giving the youngsters a run-around.

Coch Clarence Baynard cast a despairing eye over the high school squad this fall, and then buckled in to the task of turning a lot of green material into a winning court combination. With most of his last year regulars lost to the five due to graduation and other ills that beset the path of the coach, Baynard must develop his quintet from a flock of youngsters, but fortunately, are giving great promise.

Among alumni athletes who will perform against their old school team are Ronald and Robert St. John, who are coming over from Dayton for the court reunion; Forrest Ellis, Raymond and Hollis Peterson, Harry Pickering and Earl Weaver, besides a few others who may appear for the game.

OHIO HIGH SCHOOL ATHLETIC CZAR TO HOLD COURT CLINIC

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 1.—A "basketball clinic" for college and high school coaches and officials will be conducted by Ohio State University at the university gymnasium December 10, according to an announcement from H. R. Townshend, director of the Ohio High School Athletic Association.

There is some possibility of this becoming an annual event, if the clinic meets with a fair success this year, Townshend said. An interesting program has been arranged by members of the entertainment committee. In the morning Coach Dietrich of Ohio Wesleyan University and Coach Olsen of Ohio State will give demonstrations of basketball offense and defense assisted by players selected from the varsity squads of each university.

Coach L. W. St. John, athletic director of the university and chairman of the National Joint Basketball Committee, will preside at a rules interpretation meeting in the afternoon. Officiating procedure, the coach and the official, and treatment of basketball injuries will be discussed.

MERCHANTS TO END GRID YEAR SUNDAY

Xenia Merchants will wind up the 1927 football season Sunday afternoon, meeting the champion Kessler Athletic Club of Dayton at Washington Park. It is announced. The game will start at 2:30.

The Dayton eleven defeated the Dayton Buckinghams 7 to 6. The Buckinghams will be remembered as the team which defeated Xenia 9 to 0.

Whether the brief season of the Merchants will be successful or unsuccessful rests on the outcome of the Sunday contest. The Xenia eleven has won one game and lost one contest while a third was cancelled.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the attack, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

MIAMI VALLEY LEAGUE MAKES COURT SCHEDULES FOR 1928-29

Basketball schedules for next year were arranged by the Miami Valley High School Athletic Association, of which Central High is a member, at a meeting in Sidney this week, it is announced.

Xenia will play every other school in the league, including Troy, Piqua, Greenville, Sidney and Miamisburg.

A trophy will be awarded this season for the first time, to the school winning the league basketball championship. The trophy is of silver and consists of a basketball resting on a pedestal.

League members also reached an agreement to give an annual trophy in football, the first award to be made next fall when a regular league schedule of games will be played for the first time.

Schools in the league, it was also decided, will be authorized to play second team games in basketball this season if so desired.

The Miami Valley league was organized two years ago but basketball schedules were not arranged in such a manner that championship could be awarded, until this year. The football schedule for next year will be the first adopted under the league's auspices.

NOTRE DAME STAR JOINS ANDY KERR'S ALL-EASTERN TEAM

WASHINGTON, Pa., Dec. 1.—Captain Smith, star Notre Dame guard, has notified Andy Kerr that he is willing to join the all-Eastern football team which will meet a picked Pacific Coast team in a charity game in San Francisco on December 26. Kerr, who is coach at Washington and Jefferson, is assembling the eastern players.

Planagan, the Notre Dame backfield luminary, informed Kerr that he would like to make the trip but may be forced to go to Texas, where his mother is ill.

Claude Grigsby, Georgetown center, sent word that he probably would be unable to make the journey.

Dwight Fishwick, Yale end, is to let Kerr know today whether he can go.

Eleven other eastern stars already have accepted invitations.

WILBERFORCE HAS HEAVY COURT SKED

Tentative 1927-28 basketball schedule arranged for Wilberforce University calls for about twenty-eight games including twelve at home and sixteen away, according to university officials.

Coch Graves is not prepared to release the complete schedule until a later date.

Wilberforce, however, will not open its season until after the Christmas holidays, it is announced.

Thirty candidates reported for practice last night, including at least six letter men and much new material that is considered promising.

Former stars available this season include Evans and Harding, forwards; Robinson and Thompson, guards; Carter, center, and Ward, who plays any position with equal skill.

WOMAN INJURED AS AUTOS COLLIDE AT STREET CROSSING

Mrs. Samuel Andrews, Jamestown Pike, was slightly injured about the head when her touring car and a state auto driven by Henry W. Walsh, 235 N. Galloway St., division engineer for the state highway department, collided at Main and Galloway Sts., shortly after 6:30 o'clock, Thursday morning.

The touring car was turned completely around and damaged to the extent of a broken wheel.

The Xenia man accompanied Mrs. Andrews to the office of Dr. Marshall Best, W. Main St., where she received medical treatment, and then drove her home as his machine was not damaged.

The touring car was taken to the Bryant Motor Sales for repairs.

BARN UNROOFED BY WIND WEDNESDAY

Slight damage was reported from the high winds that swept Greene County and environs Wednesday night.

The Dayton Power and Light Co., or the Bell Telephone Co. had no report of damage to their lines from the wind. Despite the great velocity of the wind, the only damage learned of was the unroofing of a barn on the S. D. Chancellor farm, south of Xenia.

Coming on the heels of an all-day rain, sleet began to fall about 6 o'clock and the wind, stronger throughout the day than usual, gained momentum and continued through the night.

NOVEMBER GOES OUT LIKE FLOOD TIME

While November was going out like flood-time on the Mississippi, December was busy coming in with a weather assortment that represents the last word in this capricious autumn.

Unseasonable warmth, which has contributed much to the season's array of colds and sore throats, was followed Wednesday by one of the wettest rains of the fall.

The accompanying drop in temperature Thursday morning brought promise of more reasonable weather and a half-hearted sun contributed to the general optimism.

Care of Babies

This baby has never had a day's sickness and never a cross or fretful spell that lasted an hour. And what do you suppose is responsible for this healthy, happy condition? Not diet, for he has eaten just about anything and everything a child could eat. Not drugs, for he has not been dosed with opiates; he has never had a drop of paregoric. Nor has his sensible mother ever made him taste castor oil. Yet his nerves are sound and his little bowels are strong, and when he does seem the least restless or wakeful, or out of sorts—or likely to be—his mother has him all serene again in ten or fifteen minutes!

The secret of this complete freedom from the many ills and upsets so common to infants? Plain old-fashioned Castoria. A million and more mothers swear by Castoria, and no wonder! A few drops and an approaching fever, cold, diarrhea or constipation seems to vanish in thin air. Castoria is purely vegetable; that is why physicians tell parents they may use it freely with children of any age—the youngest infant. And how they love the taste!

Money Love

By BEATRICE BURTON Author of "SALLY'S SHOULDERS" "THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL," etc.

READ THIS FIRST:

LILY LEXINGTON, spoiled daughter of the CYRUS LEXINGTON, is engaged to marry STALEY DRUMMOND, a rich bachelor much older than herself. She is fond of him, but realizes she does not really love him the day after she accepts him, when she becomes instantly and violently infatuated with a taxicab driver whom she sees down town when she goes to meet her chum, SUE CAIN. Forgetting all about Sue, she jumps into his cab and he drives her home. She learns that his name is PAT FRANCE and that he owns his own cab in a company headed by his friend, ROY JETTERSON. He tells her that he is going to sell it to finance a piston ring that he has invented, and he and his cab vanish from the streets.

Lily misses him terribly, and decides she cares too much for him to marry Staley Drummond. But Mrs. Lexington announces the engagement, and the date of the wedding is set for June tenth. Then, on May tenth, Mrs. Lexington hires a new chauffeur, and it is Pat France. He admits to Lily that he could not resist taking the job just to be near her, and she tells him how much she loves him. Things reach a climax when Carrie, one of the housemaids who is in love with Pat, tells Mrs. Lexington and Staley about the love affair. Lily admits nothing to Staley, who refuses to let her break the engagement. But she tells her mother how much she cares for Pat, and Mrs. Lexington humiliates him so that he leaves the house. Lily leaves with him, and the next day, despite the protests and pleadings of Staley and her family, she marries him. Mr. Lexington gives her a check for $200 when her mother refuses to let her have any of her clothes from the house.

On the following Sunday morning, Pat spends several hours at Roy Jettersson's house, and Lily goes finally to get him when Pat's sister, FLORENCE, tells her dinner is ready. SAEY, Roy's wife, says Pat has just left, and Lily sees another visitor at the house—ELIZABETH ERTZ, Sadye's chum and a former sweetheart of Pat's. In a jealous rage she goes back to the house and locks herself in her bedroom all day. Next morning she gets up late, and refuses to look after the Frances' grocery store while Pat's mother gets her breakfast.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XXVI

Pat's mother pushed her steel-rimmed glasses up on her forehead and peered at Lily with narrowed eyes.

Later on, when she came to know her better, Lily was find out that whenever she wanted to see plainly she did that—pushed the spectacles up out of her way and squinted hard with her bright blue eyes.

"Well, now, that's not going to hurt you—to stand behind this counter for a minute and wait on a customer or two, my dear child," she said, in her gentle, sensible way. "I'm waiting on you when I go over to the house to get breakfast for you? Isn't that so? And somebody's got to be in the store while I'm gone. I can't leave it otherwise." She spoke patiently, as if she were explaining to a bad child why it must do a certain thing.

And Lily looked like a naughty child, in spite of her twenty-two years, as she stood facing her with sulky eyes and pouting mouth. She tossed her head. "Never mind. I can get myself something to eat, thanks," she said, and turned to go.

She did not know how to set about getting herself even the simplest kind of breakfast. But she certainly was not going to stand there in the store and deal out soap and sugar and spinach to cash customers! That was a lead-pipe cinch, she told herself, as she pushed open the side door that led into the Frances' neat, grassy yard, with its grape-arbor, its lawn-swing and its beds of spring flowers.

Mrs. France made no attempt to stop her. But a gay, full voice from the front door halted her just as she was stepping out onto the grass.

"Hello, there, folks!" Lily swung around, still holding the edge of the screen door in her hands. Sadye Jettersson with a child clinging to each hand, was just coming in, cheerful and whole-some-looking in a green house dress and white canvas slippers.

"My laundryman ran out of soap," she said to Pat's mother, "so I came over to get some."

She walked over to the shelves and began to take down bar after bar. "Charge six bars for this one," she went on. "Six bars for fifty cents, eh?"

Then she turned to Lily. "Well, how's married life going, Mrs. Pat?" she asked, in an effort to be as friendly as possible.

Lily answered her through set teeth. "Beautifully."

Then, without another word or look, she went out at the side door. She was on the verge of tears when she walked into the clean, sunlit kitchen of the little house. The coffee pot stood on the back of the stove, and on the table was a tray covered with a snowy napkin and set with china. There was a tiny vase on it, with one early rosebud from the bushes outside the doorway of her room, looking from the powder-covered dressing table to the tumbled bed with her nightgown on the floor beside it.

"And I'm supposed to clean this up," she said to herself, feeling more miserable every minute.

The clock on the dressing table said that it was ten-fifteen. In the house on Montpelier road everything would be in order by this time of day. And a ring of the bell beside Lily's bed would have brought a maid with a breakfast tray. It would have brought Mrs. Lexington with the morning's mail and a box of flowers from Staley Drummond.

It would have sent her flying into the bathroom to turn on the water for Lily's bath. It would have meant service—case—comfort—attention.

A wave of longing for all these things swept over Lily as she looked at the small, untidy room, with the bright sunlight finding every grain of dust—every mark on the furniture.

CITY EMPOWERED TO RETAIL GASOLINE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The supreme court today indicated that it would hold that the city of Lincoln, Neb., has constitutional authority to retail oil and gasoline.

After attorneys for the Standard Oil Company attacked the ordinance under which the city established gas stations, the court declined to hear further argument. This forecasts, under the custom of the court, a decision in the city's favor.

Entrance of the state of Nebraska and many cities into the business of retailing oil and gasoline grew out of a fight of state officials against alleged exorbitant prices for the product.

A Christmas Life Saver</

The Theater

Deserting prosaic business affairs for a life of mysticism, Rex Ingram, famous American film producer, has turned Moslem and is living in an oriental mansion at Nice surrounded by a bodyguard of Arabs, the London, Eng., Daily Express said Wednesday.

Ingram, according to the newspaper, is living a life amid oriental luxuries, such as might be imagined by the fertile brain of a scenario writer. For the time being the former producer is devoting himself to sculpture of the "fatalist type" and has just completed a large bronze showing a miniature of Christ in the arms of a Giant Buddha.

Films have ceased to interest Ingram, and, according to the Daily Express, he has bought a villa in Northern Africa, where he plans to live beyond the touch of civilization. His studio at Nice, which is so large that several films can be made in it simultaneously, is said to have been rented to another producer. We wonder if Ingram's sudden inspiration, if the story is really true, was not influenced by the visit of him and his wife, Alice Terry to the Orient to film "The Garden of Allah." Mention of his wife joining him in the musical pieces he staged were new religion, is not made.

Henry W. Savage, first producer in this country to present grand opera in English, died at the Massachusetts General Hospital, Tuesday. His most notable production of opera was Wagner's "Parsifal." He was equally successful in his production of light opera, musical comedy and drama. Among the musical pieces he staged were "The Merry Widow," "The Prince of Pilsen," "Excuse Me," "Evary Woman," "The County Chairman"

and "The College Widow."

Gomez Carrillo, widely known writer and former husband of Raquel Meller, noted singer, died Tuesday at Paris, after an operation. One of his books was "The Mystery of the Life and Death of Mata Hari" the beautiful and captivating dancer who was shot as a spy at Vincennes during the war after a trial which caught the interest of all France, because of her friendship, actual or alleged, with many men in high places.

HEALTH CHAMPION PICKED AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Health champions of America 1927-1928—Marie Antrim, 15, of Kingman, Kas., and J. Fred Christensen, 18, of Blanchard, Ia.—were acclaimed following the awarding of the title to them in conjunction with the International Live Stock Exposition. They were selected from among 50,000 entrants.

Miss Antrim, high school girl, scored 99.15 out of a possible 100. Christensen scored an even 99. Marie rises at 6:30, performs setting-up exercises and takes a cold shower. She does not drink, smoke, dance or make "dates" with male companions, she said.

DISTRIBUTION OF 1928 LICENSE TAGS STARTED BY CLUB

Distribution of automobile license plates for 1928 was begun Thursday at the Greene County Auto Club headquarters on N. Detroit St.

Nearly 5,500 new tags went on sale, including 4,500 plates for pleasure cars, 500 truck tags and 500 license plates for other types of motor vehicles.

The new tags can be used after December 21, according to an announcement by Dilver Belden, auto club secretary.

Auto club officials are urging motorists not to delay in purchasing the new tags in order that the usual last-minute rush at the close of the year will be avoided.

Secretary Belden asserts that no extension of time for the purchase of the plates will be granted after January 1. All automobiles must be equipped with 1928 tags after December 31. Motorists using the new tags before December 31 are also liable to prosecution, it is stated.

A filed bill of sale establishing ownership of the car will be necessary before tags are issued to motorists, while drivers seeking to buy truck licenses must show an official weight slip.

MAYOR GETS INCREASE

NILES, O., Dec. 1.—The McDonough village council has raised the salary of Mayor Roy Zeller from $900 to $1,200, due to the recent ruling which eliminated the "fee system."

Farm Notes

MULCHING WHEAT?

That mulching winter wheat with straw is of doubtful value was shown by ten years of testing at the Ohio Experiment Station.

The average yield of wheat receiving no mulch was 36.2 bushels per acre. That receiving one ton of straw per acre was 35.9 bushels; and two tons of straw was only thirty-three bushels.

The time of applying the mulch also affected yields. Mulch applied late in winter after the wheat had become dormant gave better yields than when applied early. In this test no mulch gave a yield of 36.0 bushels, one ton of straw applied late 35.8 bushels, one ton applied early 35.6 bushels, two tons applied late 33.5 bushels and two tons early 31.9 bushels.

Observation tests on the experiment farms in Meigs, Miami, and Paulding Counties also showed little benefit from mulching with straw. On all these farms no mulch and one ton of straw per acre were better than the heavier application.

Slightly more clover hay was harvested at Wooster from the plots receiving one ton of straw.

EAVEY SALESMEN ATTEND MEETING

Brief talks by officials and leading travelers for the company featured a sales conference of nearly 125 salesmen and representatives of The Eavey Co., Xenia wholesale grocers, in the ballroom of the Arcade Hotel at Springfield Wednesday night. The session opened at 7:30 o'clock.

but the benefit to the clover was not as large as expected.

L. E. Thatcher, associate in agronomy at the Experiment Station, regards the depressing effect of straw mulch as partly due to a reduction of available nitrogen in the soil. In order to overcome this deficiency the wheat was top-dressed in April this year with 100 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre. The application was of some benefit, but the no mulch and lightly mulched plots were still the best.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Only twelve boys reported at the first meeting of the high school band, called by Director E. G. Whitworth, Tuesday. Although this number is small, the director is optimistic and expects the group to increase before the week is over. The band will practice on Tuesdays and Thursdays and will furnish music at all of the home basketball games.

The second grading period at Central High ended last week and grade cards were issued to students Wednesday.

The third social event of the school year will hold Friday, December 16 when the junior class will play host to the entire student body of the senior high school. The affair will be held in the gym, where dancing will be the main feature. Entertainment will also be provided for those who do not dance.

At a recent meeting of the junior class, it was decided to depart from the usual custom of selecting class rings of a different design from the selections of classes of preceding years and to inaugurate a new custom.

Instead of doing as former classes have done, the juniors, with the assistance of the two lower classes, will pick a school ring. This ring will remain unchanged from year to year. As soon as a student reaches his junior year, he will be permitted to wear a ring.

The ring will bear the class numerals of the student and will be purchased through a local jewelry store.

Emblems for the ring are now being considered. The design of the owl is expected to prove the most popular. It is said that an old Central tradition is built around the owl.

DOWNTOWN CLUB TO HAVE COURT TEAM

The Downtown Country Club held its bi-monthly dinner-meeting at the Francis Inn, S. Detroit St., Wednesday night at 7 o'clock. Members heard a report from the committee which had charge of the recent dance sponsored by the organization at the Xenia Country Club.

Decision was also reached to organize a basketball team for the 1927-28 season.

Frederick Flynn, one of the new members voted in at the last meeting, was honor guest at Wednesday's session.

REMUS MURDER TRIAL NEAR CLIMAX

SAYS BEACH CONFESSED WITNESS DECLARES MURDER DEFENDANT ADMITTED SLAYING

Wife Of Beach Will Testify For Woman He Loved

COURT HOUSE, MAYS LANDING, N. J., Dec. 1.—Willis Beach, 50-year-old alleged illicit lover of Mrs. Margaret Lillendahl, and jointly accused with her of murdering her husband, confessed to Samuel Bark, in Baltimore, shortly after the slaying that he had fired the fatal shot, Bark testified today.

Woman was to defend woman at the trial today.

Spectators and jury expect to witness a bit of ironical drama when Mrs. Amanda Beach, gray-haired wife of Willis Beach, Mrs. Margaret Lillendahl's dapper little admirer, takes the witness stand and testifies in defense of her alleged rival.

Mrs. Beach, as wife of the accused, is not permitted by law to testify in his behalf, but she testified for Mrs. Lillendahl as her friend.

She will take the stand after the commonwealth concludes its case today, with the testimony of Samuel L. Bark, Baltimore attorney and former showman.

Harry F. Sanderson, a salesman of Sidney, Ohio, whose failure to make a complete identification of Beach as the man at the murder scene, was a surprise and disappointment to the prosecution, was under a physician's care today in Atlantic City, where he suffered a nervous collapse last night.

Rumors were current in the courtroom that Assistant Prosecutor S. Cameron Hinkle would take summary action against Sanderson and two other witnesses whose testimony caused the state to plead "surprise."

They were Jack Thornbower, young truck farmer of Vineland, N. J., home of Beach and Mrs. Lillendahl, and Henry Nitsche, of South Vineland. Thornbower denied Beach ever asked him to frame an alibi for him and Nitsche refused to identify the defendants as the couple he saw in two parked automobiles at the murder scene.

TWELVE FIREBALLS CROSS NEW ENGLAND

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 1.—Twelve fireballs racing high in the air, one with a long tail, passed over an area stretching obliquely from Eastport, Me., to Woburn, Long Island on October 16, according to an announcement made today by the Harvard College observatory as the result of recent investigations.

One of these, with a long sweeping tail, was observed as passing from horizon to horizon, at Dennisville, Me., Cambridge, Mass., Thompson, Conn., and ended above the southwest horizon of Seaford, Long Island. The air distance of this meteor was more than 430 miles. Its height could not be computed.

Harvard observers said that while this seems quite a long distance, other meteors have been known to go much farther, a group on Feb. 9, 1913, traveled from Saskatchewan to the South Atlantic off Cape Palmas. Another the meteor of July 29, 1860, went over Lake Michigan and Long Island Sound.

SAYS IMMIGRATION QUOTA PLANS SHOULD AFFECT NEIGHBORS

Restrictions For Canada
And Mexico Urged
By Solon

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Demands of enthusiastic restrictionists that the immigration quota system be extended to America's nearest neighbors—Canada and Mexico—will get an airing in the new congress. Rep. Johnson (R) of Washington, chairman of the house immigration committee, announced today.

Declaring that he favors extension of the quota system, Johnson said that the question would be considered when the committee reviews the whole field of restricted immigration.

"I am in favor of the quota system for Canada and Mexico under restrictions," said Johnson. "It is a logical development of our policy."

"Such a system should provide for free interchange for business and trading purposes in certain zones along the borders. At present the advantage is all with Canada in this matter."

"People living in Windsor, Canada, under free trade conditions, have been going over to Detroit to enjoy the high wages under the American protective system. At the same time, Canadian authorities have exercised the right to stop Americans from going into Canadian cities to work whenever they feel there is undue competition with Canadian labor."

He declared that information has reached him to the effect that Canadian and Mexican official leaders would not object to the quota system.

Smuggling of aliens into the United States through both the Canadian and Mexican borders will be one of the chief immigration matters to be considered, he said.

BILL WOULD RETURN GERMAN PROPERTY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Another effort to pass a bill returning $250,000,000 worth of German property seized during the World War was started by the house ways and means committee today.

Rep. Green, (R) of Iowa, chairman, said he expected the committee to agree to recommend passage of substantially the same alien property bill that died in the senate last year.

Under this measure a bond issue of $50,000,000 would be authorized and this sum added to proceeds of sale of property and other German funds in hand to reimburse the foreign owners.

He will ask the committee to dispose of Austrian and Hungarian claims at the same time.

BLOCS AND ALLIANCES WILL RULE NEXT CONGRESS SESSION

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The incoming seventieth congress today appeared doomed to a rule of blocs and alliances instead of the usual party control.

"Such a system should provide for free interchange for business and trading purposes in certain zones along the borders. At present the advantage is all with Canada in this matter."

"People living in Windsor, Canada, under free trade conditions, have been going over to Detroit to enjoy the high wages under the American protective system. TEMPERATURE DROP CHECKS OHIO FLOOD MENACE THURSDAY

Heavy Rains Driven By High Winds Swell
Streams

CLEVELAND, Dec. 1.—A drop in temperature of approximately 30 degrees during yesterday and last night was expected to check rising waters in several northern Ohio streams today, which for a time, had threatened to do considerable damage, as a result of twenty-four hours almost continuous rainfall.

Several streams had reached flood stage in Cuyahoga County and the Cuyahoga river was tied up by a five-mile current with the water one foot above normal. Several smaller streams were reported over their banks in some sections. The Chagrin river was out of its banks near Bentleyville and residents were reported ready to leave their homes if necessary. Wiloughby reported that the river was rising rapidly there.

Driven by a fifty-five mile an hour wind, the rainstorm swept in to Cleveland and vicinity yesterday and caused considerable damage, a check-up disclosed this morning. The weather bureau tower at the mouth of the Cuyahoga river was toppled into the stream while the wind was at its height. Many trees were blown down, one crushing an uncoupled auto, while sewers overflowed, causing cellars to be flooded. Several light standards were blown down and in one instance high tension wires were blown against a building starting a fire.

Akron reported flooded cellars and sleet-covered streets unsafe for traffic.

FORM COMMISSION TO DRAFT NATIONAL SECURITY PROGRAM

United States Not Represented—Soviet Plan Scoffed

GENEVA, Dec. 1.—Dr. Eduard Benes, foreign minister of Czechoslovakia, was today elected chairman of the security commission of the League of Nations preparatory disarmament conference. This commission was appointed to draft the views of the participating powers as to what national security each needed before limiting armaments. The United States will not be represented upon the commission, although Soviet Russia, also a non-member, will have an observer.

Dr. Urtula, of Columbia, and Dr. Unden, of Sweden, were chosen vice chairmen of the commission. Delegated to the conference have refused to take seriously the drastic and far reaching proposals of Soviet Russia for abolition of all armies, navies and military and naval air fleets, and the reduction of all forts within the next four years.

Representatives of the leading powers said they believed the Soviets' program was too "strong" for use even as a basis of discussion.

Maxim Litvinoff, head of the Soviet delegation, issued a 4,000 word document, mostly propaganda, containing a long survey of the World War and statistics on losses.

The document states that there were 10,632,000 persons killed, of whom 107,000 were Americans, and that 22,100,000 were wounded, 246,000 of them Americans. The war prisoners according to the survey, totaled 6,589,000, of whom 5,000 were Americans.

The Russians put the cost of the war at $147,922,000,000.

Despite the cold shoulder that the Soviets' proposals received from the league members, the Soviet delegates worked with unabated fervor today. Litvinoff held a number of conferences in an effort to have the Soviets' program kept before the conference.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Minister Hugh Wilson at Geneva was instructed by the state department today to advise the League of Nations that the United States sees no reason for sending an official American observer to participate in the meeting of the league's security commission.

DISCOVER PLOT TO UPSET ROUMANIA

BUCHAREST, Dec. 1.—Roumanian secret police have discovered a communist plot in Bessarabia for an uprising against the Roumanian administrative government, according to a dispatch from Kishinev today. Scores of communists have been arrested. The police claim to have discovered a manifesto revealing conspirators at work in all Bessarabian cities.

The mixed Soviet-Roumanian commission, which will attempt to arbitrate the Bessarabian frontier dispute, will meet on Saturday at Tighina.

Bessarabia was formerly a Russian province, but was annexed by Roumania after the World War.

STUDENTS ESCAPE

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 1.—College students were forced to flee to the streets here early today when fire broke out in the eleven-room boarding house of Mrs. J. A. Rinehart. The fire is believed to have started from an overheated gas stove in the room of C. E. Seible, Warren, Ohio, a freshman at Ohio State University. Loss is estimated at $1,000 and is covered by insurance.

DRAMATIC SETTING FOR GIBRALTAR SWIM

LONDON, Dec. 1.—All the glamour, frills and publicity of a moving picture stunt will mark the attempt of Miss Mercedes Gleitze, young London stenographer and English Channel swimmer, when she sets out from the African shore to swim the straits of Gibraltar next month.

"I feel sure I will make it," said Miss Gleitze, who will sail from Southampton for Tangier tomorrow. "My one chief anxiety at present is sharks. I have received a number of letters from persons who

Andrew McGough, 35, lower left, a salesman of Philadelphia, has been the object of a police search, being charged with the murder in Cincinnati, O., of Mrs. Artie M. McGough, 32, his divorced wife, and Dr. Charles Dryer, 38, both shown above. The dying couple accused McGough, whom his wife divorced two months ago. According to the physician's dying statement, McGough appeared at the door of the physician's suite with an automatic pistol in his hand just as the couple was sitting down to a lunch late at night and cried: "Now I've got you both together!" Dr. Dryer, who was separated from his wife, and Mrs. McGough clasped hands in the police patrol on the way to the hospital, where both died within two hours.

ALLEGED LEADER OF SWINDLE RING WILL BEGIN PRISON TERM

Cleveland Con Man Gets Seven-Year Sentence

CLEVELAND, Dec. 1.—The doors of the Ohio State Penitentiary were to swing open today to receive George J. J. MacKay, convicted ringleader of an alleged "million-dollar swindle ring" which flourished here for several years.

MacKay was taken from the Cuyahoga County jail at 8:10 a. m. by sheriff's deputies and started on his journey to Columbus, where he is slated to serve a seven year term.

Common Pleas Judge Baer yesterday ordered MacKay's sentence into immediate execution, although a motion for a rehearing of his case is now pending before the state supreme court.

MacKay, who gave himself up voluntarily here almost a year ago, was subsequently convicted on the specific charge of defrauding a Cleveland widow of approximately $600 and received a seven-year penitentiary sentence. Other charges were brought against him by various Clevelanders who alleged that he had obtained under false pretenses amounts ranging from small sums to several thousand dollars.

CORONER UNABLE TO LEARN IDENTITY OF FIRE VICTIM

Coroner Frank M. Chambliss spent an unprofitable afternoon at Fairfield and Osborn Wednesday while continuing his efforts to identify the charred torso of a man, found in the ruins of a barn destroyed by fire Monday night on the farm of Edward Holman, on the Wright Field military reservation, near Osborn.

The coroner made little headway in checking up on certain facts in connection with the case and was unable to interview any persons who could throw any light on the case.

Chambliss is attempting to identify the body by investigating reports of persons missing in this section since Sunday.

He expects to follow up a report of the disappearance of O. Maloney, Mt. Sterling. Maloney was scheduled to go to Middletown Monday morning, having been called by a relative, J. P. Dyer, but failed to arrive and his whereabouts are unknown.

This is the only disappearance case reported.

DEFENDANT TO TAKE STAND; PROMISING MANY REVELATIONS

Secretary Of Former Liquor King Is Also Heard

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 1.—The Remus murder trial, already replete with sensational testimony, is nearing its climax.

George Remus, the picturesque defendant, who shot and killed his wife, Imogene, and who is putting up a spectacular battle to escape the electric chair, is expected to take the stand in his own defense tomorrow or Saturday.

"I'm going to tear things wide open," he promised today. "Remus has revelations to make and no one is going to stop him."

Before Remus takes the stand, two "key" witnesses for the defense, and possibly a few minor ones, will testify to what they know of the stormy life of Remus before he killed Mrs. Remus last October 6 in Eden Park. The "key" witnesses are George Conners, Remus' business partner for years and his confidential adviser, and Willie Haar, of Savannah, Ga., whose rum running operations along the Atlantic seaboard a few years ago earned him the cognomen of "admiral of the bootleggers."

Conners, a quiet slender man of about 35 with dark curly hair and unobtrusive manner, will tell how he quit the real estate business to cast his fortunes with Remus when the "king of the bootleggers" came to Cincinnati from Chicago in 1919, how they bought one distillery after another, ran a few thousand dollars up into the millions and became wealthy; how his partner, Remus, was finally jailed for violating the prohibition act, what he knew of Mrs. Remus' alleged unfaithfulness while Remus was in prison and of events that took place immediately prior to the tragedy. For one thing, Conners will emphatically deny that he took part in any conspiracy to kill Mrs. Remus as charged by the state.

Haar, a slim, blue-eyed, flaxen haired mild mannered southerner, served time in Atlanta with Remus on a liquor conspiracy charge, and is expected to give intimate details of the alleged intimacy between Mrs. Remus and Franklin L. Dodge, former prohibition sleuth.

The Remus forces expressed jubilation today over the testimony of John T. Rogers, a St. Louis newspaper reporter. He testified that Mrs. Remus and Dodge offered St. Louis gangsters $15,000 to murder Remus in Indianapolis during Dodge's show trial, Indianapolis, which the dry agent said were "ready for Remus." He also identified a contract in which Dodge agreed to sell more than 2,000 barrels of whiskey "ready for Remus." His evidence was regarded as the strongest in favor of the defense so far given to the jury, and added importance was attached to it because of the fact that Rogers, through his newspaper work, was intimately associated with all the principals in the Remus melodrama.

NO MORE "IRRELIGIOUS QUACKERY"

More than 58,000,000 people are carrying life insurance in the United States today, where only half a century ago a suspicious public placed the insurance agent in the same category with the medical quack and the confidence man.

This is the striking contrast brought out in a study of the phenomenal growth which has made America the most thoroughly insured nation in the world since life insurance was introduced 80 years ago.

A vice-president of one of the large companies tells that when he first started out as a country lad to sell life policies his mother, his relatives and friends were shocked and did their best to dissuade him, because of the unreasoning prejudice against insurance which existed until long after the Civil War.

People once generally regarded insurance selling as a disreputable occupation. Preachers used to preach against it. People thought it irreligious to insure one's life, something like gambling against the will of God. Wives wept over it and were superstitious that it might hasten the death of their husbands.

Despite the fact that the total of life insurance has mounted year by year until now that carried in the United States passes the sixty-billion-dollar mark, the rate of increase shows no indications of being checked, it is asserted.

The increase in insurance volume of recent years is ascribed to the introduction of the new "program insurance" which provides that the policy buyer adopt a specific program of protection, taking out policies which will guarantee his family against all conceivable emergencies as the possibilities of the emergencies become apparent.

OHIO GETS BEST RATE

State Treasurer Bert B. Buckley, has succeeded in putting Ohio at the head of the list in the matter of interest secured on the state's inactive funds. In a comparative table recently published by the state treasurer of Idaho, the Ohio rate paid, on the average, by banks holding deposits of inactive state funds, is 4.85 per cent. Six other states reach a 4 per cent rate on such funds, but more than half the states report 3 per cent or under.

Ohio selects depositories for her state funds by competitive bidding on the rate of interest, having discovered in the course of her financial history that competitive bidding on the rate of interest is far more sensible and profitable than competitive bidding on the basis of political pull. The change, since it was made, has not only enabled the state to realize large sums of interest money on its funds but has removed one important source of corruption from our government machinery. Ohio people will be surprised to learn that only one other state, Kansas, has as yet adopted the sound business principles of selecting its depository banks in this way.

Formerly when the last baseball game had been played and the football players had been driven off the fields by mud and snow, the American people hibernated in the winter quarters.

But their love for active competitive sports has asserted itself and developed various pastimes for winter diversion. From thousands of basketball halls the rooters make the building shake and demonstrate that the young crowd is thoroughly awake.

And in the bowling alleys, you find men of all ages rolling the slippery ball at those elusive pins that seemed to wink and grin as so frequently they escape your attack. The men who seem very quiet and sedate during the daytime are having a rollicking good time at the top of their voices. These sports make winter life very pleasant, and no one should say the winter is dull when such chances for healthful pleasure are offered.

The Way of the World

PALACES

Few of us live in palaces, and if we do, they do us little good. The only place worth while is the palace within you. In that you truly live. Perhaps within you is only a bare and miserable shack—and you have built nothing else.

"And when my ill-schooled spirit is aflame," said Matthew Arnold, "some nobler, ampler stage of life to win, I'll stop and say, 'There were no succor here, the aids to noble life are all within.'"

Out of a multitude of decisions we build character—we build the house we are forever to live in. We do not HAVE to live in pig pens. Strange that many of us choose to.

SHAMS AND REALITIES

People often boast of their skill in seeing through shams. They can't be fooled. They can detect insincerity. That may be something to boast about but it's a gift that can never make up for the dullness and the obtuseness which keep us from detecting SINCERITY. Not to be able to identify sincerity when you see it is to put yourself down as without sensitiveness, without perspicacity, without any intellectual skill.

TRIVIALITIES

Too many of us are like the folks who will be found doctoring a toothache on the Day of Judgment. We are so quickly excited about matters that have no reference to human progress or that have no real meaning in life.

SUCCESS AND SERENITY

There is no serenity and peace of mind in what the world superficially calls a success. Results follow the act or the thought as the wheel follows the foot of man who drags the cart. Serenity can only follow the consciousness of having done as well as you could.

The Daybook

OF A

New Yorker

By Barton Rascoe

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—William Randolph Hearst has bought the old Belmont mansion at Sands Point, Long Island. The baronial shack contains an electric elevator which thoughtfully deposits such guests as like service right down on the beach. Mrs. Belmont natives of Port Washington used to say, objected strenuously to the sightseers who used to gallop to view the old Sands Point light house. The light house has been removed during the last few years, for Antoine, or Sebastian, or Jules, when you cross over under the glaring lights of the Provincetown Playhouse, and seek your chariot once more, the same little boys are still on the job, dirtier than before, more exigent than before. This MacDougal street always makes me think of some incredible stage setting, it is so noisy, so melodramatic, so over-emphasized, so Belasco. I expect some preposterous Lulu Belle to step out from the crowd and do her stuff, as the people on the by-lines applaud. It is a sordid, pushing, altogether amusing thoroughfare. And the last is irony!

Dirty little boys run up to you as you try to park your car in the narrow confines of MacDougal street, crying "Watch y'r car for yuh, mister." And when you come out of the restaurant where you have to ring the bell and ask sotto voce, for Antoine, or Sebastian, or Jules, when you cross over under the glaring lights of the Provincetown Playhouse, and seek your chariot once more, the same little boys are still on the job, dirtier than before, more exigent than before. This MacDougal street always makes me think of some incredible stage setting, it is so noisy, so melodramatic, so over-emphasized, so Belasco. I expect some preposterous Lulu Belle to step out from the crowd and do her stuff, as the people on the by-lines applaud. It is a sordid, pushing, altogether amusing thoroughfare. And the last is irony!

Coming out of Roxys at the closing hour the other night, I witnessed the grand gestures that take place as the ushers prepare to cease their reverent labors for the day. In a small balcony, near the dome of the main lobby, a bugler plays taps as the ushers below form in military parade and march smartly out.

I have yet to meet a woman who doesn't drop gloves out of her lap at the theater and cause me to search around for them in the dark, right at the tender moments of the show, and always with an insistent, "Never mind! Never mind! These gloves!" which means, "Find these gloves for me if you have to crawl around on your hands and knees in the dark till the show lets out!"

Nor have I ever met a woman, who, if she had gloves with her, doesn't drop at least one of them, if she steps out of the cab, if there is a large puddle of water there from which I have to fish them out, she (or they) will inevitably drop two gloves, with: "There go my gloves! Oh, I'm so sorry. Stupid of me! Now you have got yourself all muddy on my account! Thanks so much! Too bad you had to soil your handkerchiefs! They can be dry cleaned!"

Still, there are women who do not discover that they have left one glove in a taxi cab until they have dropped its mate and who seem to expect you to run after the cab which has already got hidden in the traffic.

Discovered: A Chinese who is an ardent Irish patriot! Lemon Lee Sing, a laundryman living in Jersey City. Not long ago he aroused some comment by adopting an eight-year-old negro orphan, who had been beating his way about the city. The two are now inseparable friends. And the other day, Judge Meaney, who had presided over the adoption, received a letter from Lemon Lee in which was enclosed one of the ten dollar Irish free state bonds, issued in 1920. Lemon explained that his Ireland was getting along pretty well now, he would like to dispose of his bonds. Would the honorable judge please dispose of them? He would and he did.

KELLYGRAMS

by Fred C. Kelly

FROM AN IRISH DIARY
We have been driving in a little medium-sized American automobile from Cork to Killybeg, across Ireland, westward, a little more than 100 miles, and having a private car is a rather costly luxury. If we hadn't been so impetuous about hiring this car, we might have discovered that the same trip in a comfortable auto-bus would cost perhaps less than $5 apiece. A private car cost several times that, with the additional advantage that one misses all the fun of visiting with other passengers en route.

Unless going far from the usual tourist routes, one is foolish to go to the expense of private cars, for the travel agencies are prepared to send you almost anywhere by automobile and in a reserved seat.

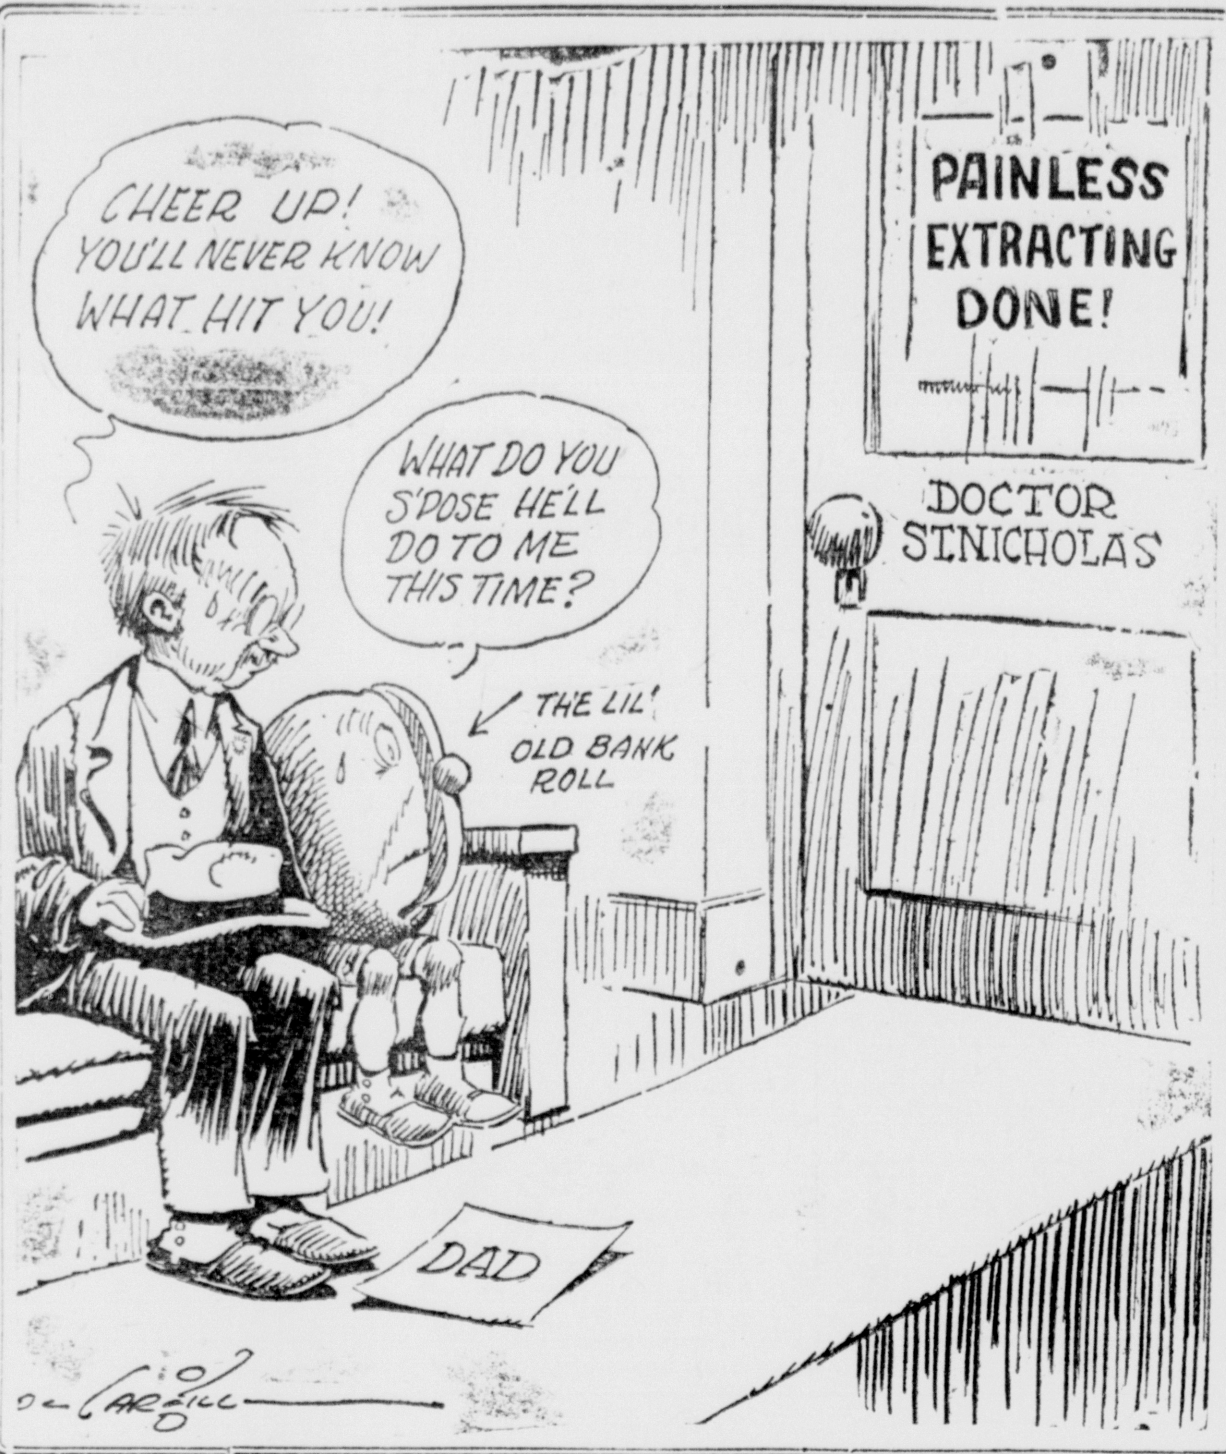

One advantage, though, of having control of a small car, is that one can stop and talk to folks who look interesting or amusing.

We passed two Irishmen, father and son, standing by a pile of peat near the roadside.

"Let's engage them in conversation and see if the Irish have as much blarney as we've been told," suggested Dr. Brink.

We asked them if they had any

WAITING FOR SANTA CLAUS

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

UNFORGIVING
When a person shows an unforgiving spirit, should that person's friendship be cultivated? Would such a person make a good life companion? Why do people worry so much about unworthy friends?

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am much in need of advice and hope you will give it to me. I am 16 and I love a boy who is two years my senior. I went with him last year and he seemed to care for me quite a lot. Then one day I insulted him, unconscious of what I was doing. He acted very coldly towards me for about a month. We became friends again but he has never asked me to go out since then. He is constantly bringing it up about the time I insulted him. I try very hard to make him believe I did not mean it, but he simply will not believe me. He has begun to go out with other girls. He tells me he does not like them, but goes out with them 'for fun'. Why does he do this when he knows it hurts me? He claims he loves me and finds a great difference between me and other girls. Do you think he means it?"

"BROKENHEARTED."
"Actions speak louder than words," my dear. If he does love you, as he says, he certainly shows objection to being photographed with us.
"Not at all!" smilingly responded one of the Irishmen. "Indeed it's a great pleasure to stand by two such fine gentlemen."
Since we are not gentlemen at all, but to all appearances, just two rough young fellows, the remark was pure blarney.

I can't get used to this driving on the left side of the road. Several times, if I had been at the steering wheel, I should have turned excitedly to the right to avoid an oncoming car, and then we probably have been shipped home in much less space than I occupied coming over. Two men on the boat were bringing their own cars over to use in touring the British Isles. I wonder how many times their cars will be smashed before they can form the habit of keeping to the left.

NO RESEMBLANCE
The teacher was doing her very best to instill the rudiments of natural history into her young charges. She held up before them a picture of a deer, but no one could tell her what it was. "Now, Tommy," she said, pointing to one small boy, "surely you know what this animal is called. Come now, think. What does your mother sometimes call you?"

The child's eyes beamed with intelligence. "Well, mum," he said haltingly, "it don't look much like a jackass to me."
A man will enter into an illicit love affair; he will tell the trusting woman:
"I love you so much that the world means nothing to me without you."
"You are the only person who understands me."
"My wife is a good woman, but he does not say that. Besides my reputation you will mean nothing, my dear, so remember, we must not be found out."

The woman who gives her soul into the keeping of any man who makes such promises must realize that he probably will lay upon the altar of their love everything but his reputation. Then, even if his wife does not understand him, even hours, others do not. Whether he thought of you before or not, may be the dream will make this young man think of you more.

"An old fashioned lass" sends a message of cheer to "Doubtful," who some time ago wrote a letter expressing his doubt as to whether there were any decent girls left nowadays.
"Dear Mrs. Lee: This column is getting many worthwhile letters written by such serious minded young people. I would like to tell "Doubtful" that I have had about the same experience, even though I am of the opposite sex. Recently a young man asked me for a date. During the evening he asked me to kiss him. I refused him primarily because I had never made a practice of kissing every boy that took me out and also because I didn't want him to think me cheap. I gave him no chance to think I wanted petting. He has never asked me for another date. A lot of girls I know positively hate petting but they do it, and allow it because they know that the boys with whom they associate expect it of them. I for one will stand by my theory and will make exception for no boy. I don't think there is a boy in our community who doesn't go in for petting. So all I can do is wait. I sincerely hope that "Doubtful" will get a real decent girl of whom he dreams. AN OLD FASHIONED LASS."

I Have Said in My Heart

COWARDICE
"All men are cowards," bitterly affirmed a woman, who had recently been embroiled in a matrimonial tangle than even involved the legitimacy of her child, whom her husband proclaimed did not belong to him.

Not all men are cowards. Indeed, few men are physical cowards, but I will venture to affirm that if a hundred women picked at random were asked the question ninety-five out of the hundred would say more men were moral cowards.

A man steers clear of breaking the eleventh commandment. He never breaks: "Thou shalt not have a man out." If he can possibly help it.

The greatest moral coward in the world makes a fetish of convention. He keeps the laws of society, even if he is prone to fracture the laws of God.

A man will enter into an illicit love affair; he will tell the trusting woman:
"I love you so much that the world means nothing to me without you."
"You are the only person who understands me."
"My wife is a good woman, but he does not say that. Besides my reputation you will mean nothing, my dear, so remember, we must not be found out."

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Albert C. Ritchie made a mistake in 1925 when he preferred a third term as governor of Maryland to a United States senate seat.

He could have had the senate just as well.

Senator O. E. Weller, who was running for re-election, is a Republican. Ritchie, as a Democrat, had every right to beat him if he could.

And he could. The nomination was his, for saying so, Representative Millard E. Tydings, who took it because Ritchie didn't want it, won in a walk.

Ritchie could have won in a slower walk.

Another term as governor was Ritchie's own selection.

It's easy to see why. He had presidential aspirations. Politicians consider a governorship a better taking off place for the presidency than they do a senatorship. The theory is that a senator is more or less lost among 95 others, while a governor stands out by himself.

Besides, no Maryland governor ever served three terms before, which was an additional distinction in Ritchie's case.

This may be sound reasoning if the governorship is the governorship of a big pivotal state.

The governor of New York becomes, automatically, a national character as soon as he's elected. So do the governors of states like Ohio and Illinois, in lesser degree.

That the governorship of one of the smaller states has any such political value isn't so plain, unless the incumbent can manage to attract attention to himself in some other way, as by means of a police strike or a well managed flood or a graft exposure or something of that sort.

Nationally, Maryland is a good deal of a political backwash. Ritchie is rather extra prominent but ordinarily it's a question if the average American, except in the immediate neighborhood, can tell off hand, who is the governor of Maryland.

To a mid-westerner, the New York governorship probably means more than a senatorship, but a senatorship means a lot more to him than the governorship of Maryland.

Ritchie, a dyed-in-the-wool Marylander and doubtless accustomed, like most of us, to think of his own habitat as the most important spot on earth, seems to have overestimated the political publicity value of that Annapolis governorship of his.

He evidently realized the necessity of advertising himself, for he's made quite an extensive speaking tour before public gatherings of one kind or another, but he hasn't mass production of popularity.

As it was, he'd have been more effective, from the standpoint of his own good, as Senator than as Gov. Ritchie.

In fact, he's so much classier than the typical politician that he's been a better advertisement for his governorship, perhaps, than the governorship has been for him.

His declaration in Washington recently that Al Smith, as the situation has shaped itself, is entitled to first consideration as the Democrats' bid for the presidential prize, is of a piece with the good sportsmanship the Maryland executive has shown all through.

Get complete details

TOMORROW at Ford salesrooms

FOR SEVERAL years we have been working on the new Ford car. For weeks and months you have been hearing rumors about it. For the past few days you have been reading some of the details of it in the newspapers.

Whatever you do tomorrow, take at least fifteen minutes to get the full story of this new automobile.

You will realize then that it is an entirely new and different Ford car, designed and created to meet modern conditions—a car that brings you more beauty, speed, quiet, comfort, safety, economy and stamina than you ever thought possible in a low-price car.

Automobile history will be made tomorrow, for the new Ford is not only new in appearance and performance . . . it is new in mechanical design. Many features of it are exclusive Ford developments. Some are wholly new in automobile practice. Its low price is a reflection of manufacturing improvements and economies that are as epoch-making as the car itself.

Nineteen years of experience in building 15,000,000 automobiles are behind the new Ford car and have counted in its making. Resources unmatched in the motor car industry are its heritage and its birthright.

The Ford policy of owning the source of raw materials, of making virtually every part, of doing business at a small profit per car, has cut many dollars off the price you would ordinarily have to pay for a car like this.

So we say to you—learn about this new Ford car tomorrow. Compare it with any other car in the light-car field for beauty of line—for comfort—for speed

—for quick acceleration—for flexibility in traffic . . . for steadiness at all speeds . . . for power on the hills . . . for economy and low cost of up-keep . . . for its sturdy ability to stand up under countless thousands of miles of service.

Then you will know why tomorrow will be remembered as one of the greatest days in the entire history of the automobile industry. . . . Then you will know why the new Ford car will be your car.

CAESARCREEK HIGH TEAMS OPEN FRIDAY WITH ALUMNI GAMES

Caesarcreek High School alumni are being rallied for the basketball game with the Caesarcreek High regulars Friday night which will open the court season for the high school team.

Both boys' and girls' teams will help the high school squads inaugurate the season Friday night at Paintersville and many former court stars are getting the kinks out of their knees in anticipation of giving the youngsters a run-around.

Coach Clarence Barnard cast a despairing eye over the high school squad this fall, and then buckled in to the task of turning a lot of green material into a winning court combination. With most of his last year's regulars lost to the five due to graduation and other ills that beset the path of the coach, Barnard must develop his quietest from a flock of youngsters, that fortunately, are giving great promise.

Among alumni athletes who will perform against their old school are Ronald and Robert St. John, who are coming over from Dayton for the court reunion; Forest Ellis, Raymond and Hollis Peterson, Harry Pickering and Earl Weaver, besides a few others who may appear for the game.

OHIO HIGH SCHOOL ATHLETIC CZAR TO HOLD COURT CLINIC

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 1.—A "basketball clinic" for college and high school coaches and officials will be conducted by Ohio State University at the university gymnasium December 10, according to an announcement from H. R. Townsend, director of the Ohio High School Athletic Association.

There is some possibility of this becoming an annual event, if the clinic meets with a fair success this year, Townsend said. An interesting program has been arranged by members of the entertainment committee. In the morning Coach Dietrick of Ohio Wesleyan University and Coach Olsen of Ohio State will give demonstrations of basketball offense and defense assisted by players selected from the varsity squads of each university.

Coach L. W. St. John, athletic director of the university and chairman of the National Joint Basketball Committee, will preside at a rules interpretation meeting in the afternoon. Officiating procedure, the coach and the official, and treatment of basketball injuries will be discussed.

In the evening all present will be guests of Ohio State University at their opening basketball game against Ohio Wesleyan. The interpretation of the rules as decided by the meeting in the afternoon, will be adopted by the schools of the Ohio High School Athletic Association, Townsend said.

MERCHANTS TO END GRID YEAR SUNDAY

Xenia Merchants will wind up the 1927 football season Sunday afternoon, meeting the champion Kessler Athletic Club of Dayton at Washington Park. It is announced. The game will start at 2:30.

The Kesslers are said to be the 150-pound champions of Dayton and have lost but one game this season—that to West Carrollton.

The Dayton eleven defeated the Dayton Buckinghams 7 to 6. The Buckinghams will be remembered as the team which defeated Xenia 9 to 0.

Whether to brief season of the Merchants will be successful or unsuccessful rests on the outcome of the Sunday contest. The Xenia eleven has won one game and lost one contest while a third was cancelled.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

MIAMI VALLEY LEAGUE MAKES COURT SCHEDULES FOR 1928-29

Basketball schedules for next year were arranged by the Miami Valley High School Athletic Association, of which Central High is a member, at a meeting in Sidney this week. It is announced.

Xenia will play every other school in the league, including Troy, Piqua, Greenville, Sidney and Miamisburg.

A trophy will be awarded this season for the first time, to the school winning the league basketball championship. The trophy is of silver and consists of a basketball resting on a pedestal.

League members also reached an agreement to give an annual trophy in football, the first award to be made next fall when a regular league schedule of games will be played for the first time.

Schools in the league, it was also decided, will be authorized to play second team games in basketball this season if so desired.

The Miami Valley league was organized two years ago but basketball schedules were not arranged in such a manner that championship could be awarded, until this year. The football schedule for next year will be the first adopted under the league's auspices.

NOTRE DAME STAR JOINS ANDY KERR'S ALL-EASTERN TEAM

WASHINGTON, Pa., Dec. 1.—Smith, star Notre Dame guard, has notified Andy Kerr that he is willing to join the all-Eastern football team which will meet a picked Pacific Coast team in a charity game in San Francisco on December 26. Kerr, who is coach at Washington state Jefferson, is assembling the eastern players.

Flanagan, the Notre Dame backfield luminary, informed Kerr that he would like to make the trip but may be forced to go to Texas, where his mother is ill.

Claude Grigsby, Georgetown center, sent word that he probably would be unable to make the journey.

Dwight Fishwick, Yale end, is to let Kerr know today whether he can go.

Eleven other eastern stars already have accepted invitations.

WILBERFORCE HAS HEAVY COURT SKED

Tentative 1927-28 basketball schedule arranged for Wilberforce University calls for about twenty-eight games including twelve at home and sixteen away, according to university officials.

Coach Graves is not prepared to release the complete schedule until a later date.

Wilberforce, however, will not open its season until after the Christmas holidays, it is announced.

Thirty candidates reported for practice not long ago, including at least six letter men and much new material that is considered promising.

Former stars available this season include Evans and Harding, forwards; Robinson and Thompson, guards; Carter, center, and Ward, who plays any position with equal skill.

WOMAN INJURED AS AUTOS COLLIDE AT STREET CROSSING

Mrs. Samuel Andrews, Jamestown Pike, was slightly injured about the head when her touring car and a state auto driven by Henry W. Walsh, 235 N. Galloway St., division engineer for the state highway department, collided at Main and Galloway Sts., shortly after 6:30 o'clock, Thursday morning.

Mrs. Andrews, driving east on Main St., was returning home after driving her husband to Xenia, while the state car was traveling south on Galloway St., according to Mrs. Andrews.

The touring car was turned completely around and damaged to the extent of a broken wheel.

The Xenia man accompanied Mrs. Andrews to the office of Dr. Marshall Best, W. Main St., where she received medical treatment, and then drove her home as his machine was not damaged.

The touring car was taken to the Bryant Motor Sales for repairs.

BARN UNROOFED BY WIND WEDNESDAY

Slight damage was reported from the high winds that swept Greene County and environs Wednesday night.

The Dayton Power and Light Co., or the Bell Telephone Co., had no report of damage to their lines from the wind. Despite the great velocity of the wind, the only damage learned of was the unroofing of a barn on the S. D. Chancellor farm, south of Xenia.

Coming on the heels of an all-day rain, sleet began to fall about 6 o'clock and the wind, stronger throughout the day than usual, gained momentum and continued through the night.

NOVEMBER GOES OUT LIKE FLOOD TIME

While November was going out like flood-time on the Mississippi, December was busy coming in with a weather assortment that represents the last word in this capricious autumn.

Unseasonable warmth, which has contributed much to the season's array of colds and sore throats, was followed Wednesday by one of the wettest rains of the fall.

The accompanying drop in temperature Thursday morning brought promise of more reasonable weather and a half-hearted sun contributed to the general optimism.

Care of Babies

This baby has never had a day's sickness and never a cross or fretful spell that lasted an hour. And what do you suppose is responsible for this healthy, happy condition? Not diet, for he has eaten just about anything and everything a child could eat. Not drugs, for he has not been dosed with opiates; he has never had a drop of paregoric. Nor has his sensible mother ever made him taste castor oil. Yet his nerves are sound and his little bowels are strong, and when he does seem the least restless or wakeful, or out of sorts—or likely to be—his mother has him all serene again in ten or fifteen minutes!

The secret of this complete freedom from the many ills and upsets so common to infants? Plain old-fashioned Castoria. A million and more mothers swear by Castoria, and no wonder! A few drops, and an approaching fever, colic, diarrhea or constipation seems to vanish in thin air. Castoria is purely vegetable; that is why physicians tell parents they may use it freely with children of any age—the youngest infant. And how they love the taste!

One word of warning: get the pure real Castoria. Fletcher's Castoria is the original. It is the kind doctors specify. And with every bottle comes a book on "Care and Feeding of Babies" that is worth its weight in gold to any mother or prospective mother. So, remember, tell your druggist you wish Fletcher's Castoria. —Adv.

Money Love

LILY LEXINGTON, spoiled daughter of the CYRUS LEXINGTON, is engaged to marry STALEY DRUMMOND, a rich bachelor much older than herself. She is fond of him, but realizes she does not really love him the day after she accepts him, when she becomes instantly and violently infatuated with a taxicab driver whom she sees down town when she goes to meet her chum, SUE CAIN. Forgetting all about Sue, she jumps into his cab and he drives her home. She learns that his name is PAT FRANCE and that he owns his own cab in a company headed by his friend, ROY JETTERSON. He tells her that he is going to sell it to finance a piston ring that he has invented, and he and his cab vanish from the streets.

Lily misses him terribly, and decides she cares too much for him to marry Staley Drummond. But Mrs. Lexington announces the engagement, and the date of the wedding is set for June tenth. Then, on May tenth, Mrs. Lexington hires a new chauffeur, and it is Pat France. He admits to Lily that he could not resist taking the job just to be near her, and she tells him how much she loves him. Things reach a climax when Carrie, one of the housemaids who is in love with Pat, tells Mrs. Lexington about the love affair. Lily admits nothing to Staley, who refuses to let her break the engagement. But she tells her mother how much she cares for Pat, and Mrs. Lexington humiliate him so that he leaves the house. Lily leaves with him, and the next day, despite the protests and pleadings of Staley and her family, she marries him. Mr. Lexington gives her a check for $200 when her mother refuses to let her have any of her clothes from the house.

On the following Sunday morning, Pat spends several hours at Roy Jettersen's house, and Lily goes finally to get him when Pat's sister, FLORENCE, tells her dinner is ready. SADDY, Roy's wife, says Pat has just left, and Lily sees another visitor at the house—ELIZABETH ERTZ, Saddy's chum, and a former sweetheart of Pat's. In a jealous rage she goes back to the house and locks herself in her bedroom all day. Next morning she gets up late, and refuses to look after the Frances' grocery store while Pat's mother gets her breakfast.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XXVI

Pat's mother pushed her steel-rimmed glasses up on her forehead and peered at Lily with narrowed eyes.

Later on, when she came to know her better, Lily was to find out that whenever she wanted to see plainly she did that—pushed the spectacles up out of her way and squinted hard with her bright blue eyes.

"Well, now, that's not going to hurt you to stand behind this counter for a minute and wait on a customer, my dear child," she said, in her gentle, sensible way. "I'm waiting on you when I go over to the house to get breakfast for you? Isn't that so? And somebody's got to be in the store while I'm gone. I can't leave it, otherwise. She spoke patiently, as if she were explaining to a bad child why it must do a certain thing.

And Lily looked like a naughty child, in spite of her twenty-two years, as she stood facing her with sulky eyes and pouting mouth. She tossed her head. "Never mind. I can get myself something to eat, thanks," she said, and turned to go.

She did not know how to get about getting herself even the simplest kind of breakfast. But she certainly was not going to stand there in the store and deal out soap and sugar and spinach to cash customers. That was a lead-pipe cinch, she told herself, as she pushed open the side door that led into the Frances' neat, grassy yard, with its grape-arbor, its lawn swing and its beds of spring flowers.

Mrs. France made no attempt to stop her. But a ray, full voice from the front door halted her just as she was stepping out onto the grass.

"Hello, there, folks!"

Lily swung around, still holding the edge of the screen door in her hands. Saddy Jettersen, with a child clinging to each hand, was just coming in, cheerful and whole-some-looking in a green house dress and white canvas slippers.

"My laundress ran out of soap," she said to Pat's mother, "so I came over to get some."

She walked over to the shelves and began to take down bar after bar. "Charge six bars of this to me," she went on. "Six bars for

The Theater

Deserting prosaic business affairs for a life of mysticism, Rex Ingram, famous American film producer, has turned Moslem and is living in an oriental mansion at Nice surrounded by a bodyguard of Arabs, the London, Eng., Daily Express said Wednesday.

Ingram, according to the news- and "The College Widow" paper, is living a life amid oriental luxuries, such as might be imagined by the fertile brain of a scenarist. For the time being the former producer is devoting himself to sculpture of the "fatalist type" and has just completed a large bronze showing a miniature of Christ in the arms of a Giant Buddha.

Films have ceased to interest Ingram, and, according to the Daily Express, he has bought a villa in Northern Africa, where he plans to live beyond the touch of civilization. His studio at Nice, which is so large that several films can be made in it simultaneously, is said to have been rented to another producer. We wonder if Ingram's sudden inspiration, if the story is really true, was not influenced by the visit of him and his wife, Alice Terry to the Orient to film "The Garden of Allah." Mention of his wife joining him in the musical pieces he staged were new religion, is not made.

Henry W. Savage, first producer in this country to present grand opera in English, died at the Massachusetts General Hospital, Tuesday. His most notable production of opera was Wagner's "Parsifal." He was equally successful in his production of light opera, musical comedy and drama. Among the musical pieces he staged were "The Merry Widow," "The Prince of Pilsen," "Excuse Me," "Every Woman," "The County Chairman."

Gomez Carrillo, widely known writer and former husband of Rachel Meller, noted singer, died Tuesday at Paris, after an operation. One of his books was "The Mystery of the Life and Death of Mata Hari" the beautiful and captivating dancer who was shot as a spy at Vincennes during the war after a trial which caught the interest of all France, because of her friendship, actual or alleged, with many men in high places.

The James A. Johnston shoe store has been sold to Fred Nesbitt and Frank Keyes. The Star Theater will open its new vaudeville show this week with one of the best set of attractions on the road. The high school paper is a go and the first number will likely be out before Christmas. Dr. R. H. Grube gave his first of a series of fine lectures at the Presbyterian Church, under auspices of the Mens' League of that church.

DISTRIBUTION OF 1928 LICENSE TAGS STARTED BY CLUB

Distribution of automobile license plates for 1928 was begun Thursday at the Greene County Auto Club headquarters on N. Detroit St.

Nearly 5,500 new tags went on sale, including 4,500 plates for pleasure cars, 500 truck tags and 500 license plates for other types of motor vehicles.

The new tags can be used after December 21, according to an announcement by Oliver Belden, auto club secretary.

Auto club officials are urging motorists not to delay in purchasing the new tags in order that the usual last-minute rush at the close of the year will be avoided.

Secretary Belden asserts that no extension of time for the purchase of the plates will be granted after January 1. All automobiles must be equipped with 1928 tags after December 31. Motorists using the new tags before December 21 are liable to prosecution, it is stated.

A filed bill of sale establishing ownership of the car will be necessary before tags are issued to motorists, while drivers seeking to buy truck licenses must show an official weight slip.

MAYOR GETS INCREASE

NILES, O., Dec. 1.—The McDonald village council has raised the salary of Mayor Roy Zeller from $900 to $1,200, due to the recent ruling which eliminated the "fee system."

Farm Notes

MULCHING WHEAT?

That mulching winter wheat with straw is of doubtful value was shown by ten years of testing at the Ohio Experiment Station.

The average yield of wheat receiving no mulch was 35.2 bushels per acre. That receiving one ton of straw per acre was 35.9 bushels; and two tons of straw was only thirty-three bushels.

The time of applying the mulch also affected yields. Mulch applied late in winter after the wheat had become dormant gave better yields than when applied early. In this test no mulch gave a yield of 36.0 bushels, one ton of straw applied late 35.8 bushels, one ton applied early 35.6 bushels, two tons applied late 33.5 bushels and two tons early 31.9 bushels.

Observation tests on the experiment farms in Meigs, Miami, and Paulding Counties also showed little benefit from mulching with straw. On all these farms no mulch and one ton of straw per acre were better than the heavier application.

Slightly more clover hay was harvested at Wooster from the plots receiving one ton of straw, early 31.9 bushels.

EAVEY SALESMEN ATTEND MEETING

Brief talks by officials and leading travelers for the company featured a sales conference of nearly 125 salesmen and representatives of The Eavey Co., Xenia wholesale grocers, in the ballroom of the Arcade Hotel at Springfield Wednesday night. The session opened at 7:30 o'clock.

but the benefit to the clover was not as large as expected.

L. E. Thatcher, associate in agronomy at the Experiment Station, regards the depressing effect of straw mulch as partly due to a reduction of available nitrogen in the soil. In order to overcome this deficiency the wheat was top-dressed in April this year with 100 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre.

The application was of some benefit, but the no mulch and lightly mulched plots were still the best.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Only twelve boys reported at the first meeting of the high school band, called by Director E. G. Whitworth, Tuesday. Although this number is small, the director is optimistic and expects the group to increase before the week is over. The band will practice on Tuesdays and Thursdays and will furnish music at all of the home basketball games.

The second grading period at Central High ended last week and grade cards were issued to students Wednesday.

The third social event of the school year will hold away Friday, December 16 when the junior class will play host to the entire student body of the senior high school. The affair will be held in the gym, where dancing will be the main feature. Entertainment will also be provided for those who do not dance.

At a recent meeting of the junior class, it was decided to depart

from the usual custom of selecting class rings of a different design from the selections of classes of preceding years and to inaugurate a new custom.

Instead of doing as former classes have done, the juniors, with the assistance of the two lower classes, will pick a school ring. This ring will remain unchanged from year to year. As soon as a student reaches his junior year, he will be permitted to wear a ring.

The ring will bear the class numerals of the student and will be purchased through a local jewelry store.

Emblems for the ring are now being considered. The design of the owl is expected to prove the most popular. It is said that an old Central tradition is built around the owl.

DOWNTOWN CLUB TO HAVE COURT TEAM

The Downtown Country Club held its bi-monthly dinner-meeting at the Francis Inn, S. Detroit St., Wednesday night at 7 o'clock.

Members heard a report from the committee which had charge of the recent dance sponsored by the organization at the Xenia Country Club.

Decision was also reached to organize a basketball team for the 1927-28 season.

Frederick Flynn, one of the new members voted in at the last meeting, was honor guest at Wednesday's session.

NEWSBOYS HOME TO BE REMODELED

TOLEDO, O., Dec. 1.—Directors of the Newsboys' Association have announced that $100,000 is to be spent in remodeling the newsboys building better to meet the needs of the association.

A huge gymnasium will take the place of the show house, now a part of the building. The playhouse, known as the Auditorium theater, is the last legitimate stage to operate here. Except for home talent plays this winter the playhouse will not be used for dramatic purposes.
